"Baby Mine."

Margaret Mayo's play, "Baby Mine" will be revealed at the Keith theatre Nov. 22 by a clever company of players under the direction of Wm. A. Brady, Ltd. "Baby Mine" comes with a record of one solid year at Daly's theatre, New York, and is now nearing its second year at Sir Charles Wyndham's Criterion theatre in London. Productions are shortly to be made in Paris, Berlin, Vienna, St. Petersburg and Australia.

The farcical possibilities of "Baby Mine" are obvious, and Margaret Mayo, the author, is said to have handled them with unusual ingenuity and skill. Indeed, no comedy within memory is said to have surpassed this in its swift, compact, technique. It will be presented here with an excellent company of players, and make an hilarious evening's entertainment.

Tim Murphy.

Tim Murphy's comedy, "The New Code", promises to explain why the house big enough to hold two families has not yet been built. "It is not," as Mr. Murphy said in an interview, "a matter of too much mother-in-law so much as an infrequent revision of the uncodified laws of petticoat government. All such governments are in need of a new code—elastic in restrictions, charitable in effects, reversible in judgment, mutual in confidence, love, freedom and tending but to one broad result—happiness." Likely, Mr. Murphy is right, or has also made the discovery that where there is a mother-in-law, there, too, is to be located a daughter-in-law, and again the old proverb of the "Smoke and the Fire" is given the stamp of truth. "The New Code" will be presented at the Keith next Tuesday evening.
