was impossible for any guest to be other than happy. From 8:30 until past midnight the guests were merry; the early part of the evening being devoted to contributions from the story-tellers' pack and selections from the vocalists of the party; the latter part to a banquet, the menu of which was varied and greatly enjoyed. Seated at two long tables, and with Attorney Halligan as toastmaster, there was a low of reason and song for two hours, each reponse to a toast being followed by a song. The toasts were brief but well delivered, each of the dozen or more speakers complimenting the host on his business career in North Platte, congratulating him on having reached the 44th milestone and wishing him many returns of his birth anniversary.

Heartily did the guests drink to the
