The railroad bridge east of town is being converted into a double track bridge, that is, additional rails are being laid so that a train approaching the bridge on either the east or west track need not switch over to the one line of rails, but continues on the same line of rails on which it approached. Of course two trains from opposite directions cannot enter the bridge at the same time. In making this change the company dispenses with two day and two night men, a saving of $240 a month. To save this item the change is evidently made, for it does not expedite the movement of trains.

Studebaker
Studebaker

More real car for your money than any other car on earth. Nine times out of ten you would buy a Studebaker if full investigation were made. Sells for less money; has a steel body, a more powerful engine, less weight, as against our would-be competitors with wooden body, less engine energy, more money, more weight, no priming cups, which are all very important in an automobile.

All country customers I sell to will be taken care of free of charge as to garage room while in and when in city.
