Showing Off the Author.
One day the Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, in a tramp through Cornwall, came to a little village in which a tea meeting was going on. Mr. Pearse entered the little chapel and joined in the tea. He was, in the most unceremonious of costumes, which was an act of sense on his part, but during the progress of tea one or two of the "leaders" managed to recognize him, whereupon one of them approached him and said in an anxious whisper:

"Be you the Rev. Mark Guy Pearse?"

"Yes—I be," he answered.

"I thought as how you was. Now, do you see, we want to raise a little money, and a thought have struck us Do 'ee just come out quiet like and say nothing to nobody, and then we will put 'ee in the vestry, and we will go into the chapel and say, 'The Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, author of 'Daniel Quorum,' is in the vestry and can be seen at threepence each, the proceeds to go for the good of the cause.'"—London Answers.

The Top Hat in Sculpture.
The statue of Alfred de Musset, placed some years ago at Neuilly, just outside the Porte Maillot (Paris), represents the poet in the outdoor costume of his epoch, holding a silk hat in one hand. Personally I infinitely prefer this "dandy Musset" to the huge and cumbersome group outside the Comedie Francaise or the enormous composition in relief on the Cours-la-Reine. Musset is perhaps the only individual—certainly the only poet—who has three statues in Paris. The most remarkable effort in this line which I have noticed is the large equestrian statue of Mr. Sawbridge in front of the principal entrance to Olan-fish towers, near Wye, Kent. I fancy he was a lord mayor, and, seated on a prancing steed, he is holding an early Victorian top hat about eighteen inches in front of his brow. A tight frock coat completes the tout ensemble.—London Notes and Queries.

One Didn't Count.
A local official, at a dinner in Philadelphia, praised the Quaker City ardently.

"I must even praise," he said with a smile, "our exclusiveness—we carry it so far, you know. Birth is not enough with us; residence is equally important, and they who live above Market street are doomed. Here, surely, is exclusiveness with a vengeance."

"They tell a story about a dinner in Rittenhouse square. At this dinner, as the fish course began, one woman whispered to another:

"Dear me, there are thirteen at table!"

"But the other woman smiled and answered calmly:

"Compose yourself, my dear Mrs. Caddledler Waddie. Mrs. North-Broad is not really one of us. She lives uptown, you know."—Exchange.
