Robert Hart Cary.

The Daily Missoulian, of Missoula, Mont., contained the following notice of the death of Robert Cary.

Early Yesterday morning, Robert Hart Cary, physical director at the University of Montana, ended a long fight against death and passed away, quietly and without pain. The end was not unexpected. Since Wednesday afternoon the physicians at St. Patrick's hospital had been fighting grimly in an effort to prolong a breath of life until his parents, who are even now speeding on their way from Nebraska, could arrive at his bedside. Mr. Cary was in a comatose condition for 18 hours before his death and oxygen was administered at frequent intervals in order to keep him alive until his father and mother could reach his bedside.

The disease proved too strong, however, and at about 6 o'clock yesterday morning the young man died. A few friends, some of his associates at the university and others who had known and loved him for years were at the bedside when death came.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Cary, the parents of the dead man, will reach Missoula early this morning and funeral arrangements will be completed upon their arrival. Last night the body was removed to the Sigma Chi fraternity house, where it lies in state.

Keen grief was general yesterday when the news of Mr. Cary's death became known. The young man was unusually popular and could count as his friend every man with whom he had ever come in contact. The quickness with which death came added to the shock. Although Mr. Cary has been in ill health for years, he had never seemed near death. His cheerful demeanor and his optimism bore no trace of a sense of approaching death. Last week he was taken to the hospital with what seemed a slight case of tonsillitis.

He recovered, apparently, and on Saturday left the hospital and went out to the university, where he took charge of the football squad in the absence of Coach Philoon. On Monday he again coached the football men and seemed in good health. He became ill in the evening, though, and was taken to the hospital again. There he sank quickly and on Tuesday noon became unconscious. His condition grew rapidly worse until at last all hope of recovery was abandoned and the physicians administered oxygen in a vain attempt to keep the spark of life until the parents, summoned from their home in North Platte, Neb., could arrive in Missoula.

A combination of diseases caused the death of Robert Cary. He had been suffering for several years with diabetes. To combat this disease he fasted and dieted carefully and the fact that he never ate starchy foods seemed to have caused a reaction, which contributed to his death. A cold, which took the form of tonsillitis, weakened him and hastened the end.

Although his parents live in Nebraska, Robert Cary's real home, during the last 10 years of his life, was in Missoula. He entered the university here in 1904.

Robert Hart Cary was born in Peoria, Ill., on December 15, 1886. His parents moved to North Platte while their son was young and it was there that he spent his boyhood. He came to Missoula in 1904 and entered the University of Montana. He was a splendid athlete and won signal honors at football, basketball, baseball and track athletics here. He holds the 100-yard dash record for Montana field, having run the distance there in ten seconds. He was a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity during this time and always remained an active member. In 1907 he left Montana and went to Yale where he took further honors as a track athlete, winning races in a number of meets and holding during his college course, the premier position among Yale's sprinters. It was the rigorous system of training he followed while at Yale that ultimately caused his death. After finishing his college course (he graduated from the Sheffield scientific school in 1909) he broke training too abruptly and wrecked his digestive system.

After graduation he returned to the west. He went first to Spokane, where he worked in the Old National bank for a time.

After working in Spokane for a while Mr. Cary returned to Missoula and worked as a reporter for The Missoulian until 1910 he was appointed athletic director at the University of Montana. He served there with admirable success turning out two championship football teams and two championship track teams. This is the position he held at the time of his death.

When Robert Cary first returned to Missoula he was suffering with diabetes and told friends at the time that he did not expect to live more than a few years. Yet he never complained nor gave up the fight. With death staring him in the face all the time he went his way, happy and unflinching. He was the cleanest of men morally and was a true Christian in beliefs and practice. He lived a life of which he could be unashamed and went to his death without a whimper, calmly facing the end he expected at any time. He was a man of whose friendship one can be thoroughly proud. He leaves behind him scores of friends who will treasure his memory and on whom the influence of his life will always be felt.

BUICK MOTOR CARS

Average 400 Miles to the Gallon of Oil.

And many owners of the new series Buick cars are getting even better results. This is proof of the superiority of the Buick oiling system and of the high efficiency of the Buick cooling. It is double the average per gallon of oil obtained in other cars. You cannot get economy in oil consumption without the proper oiling system; nor maximum economy out of any oiling system unless the motor cools properly. The amount of oil pumped is proportional to the needs of the motor. The faster the motor runs the more oil supplied. This means perfect lubrication under every condition of running. The oiling system cannot become clogged up. The minute anything obstructs the passage of oil through any one lead, the pump generates a high pressure sufficient to dislodge the obstruction without injuring the system. Clean cool oil is always being furnished to the working parts of the motor. The sight feed on the dash shows the exact amount of oil being delivered. As the oiling system is the most vital part of your entire automobile, it will be well for you to investigate the system used on the car you intend to buy.
