Announcement

herewith announce my candidacy for county commissioner on the republican ticket and ask the support of all citizens and pledge to conduct the county affairs in an economical and business way if elected.

Shall We Vote to Overturn It? One of the most obvious facts of current history is that the American people are just now coming into a period of a wonderful business expan-

Every commercial agency gives testimony confirming it.

· Every business interest feels the impulse that is driving trade forward. Every business firm will tell you trade is picking up and orders increasing in size and number.

Every traveling iman finds a spirit of optimism prevailing in business circles. These trade scouts, the first to detect symptoms of revival and depression, are uniform in their testimony of improved and improving conditions.

Markets for manufactured goods are so strong that factories are running high and labor is well employed.

Notwithstanding there are abundant crops thruout the world, the total being in excess of nearly all previous records, farm prices remain at a high point, with a certainty of being in active demand at highly profitable figures.

When this condition of affairs exists is it not prudent to caution against radical change in our industry policies? And the credit inuring to the present administration is increased by consideration of what it has had to contend Wheat flour, there, measured by the with.

The New York Herald's annual election forecast indicates a lead for Woodrow Wilson, as a result of a countrywide canvass. Another month may however show a different sentiment. The Herald states that the democrats are shown to present a solid front everywhere, with general unity of action, while the republicans are of course divided. This forecast shows just what any political observer has always noted, that the democratic party is not divided when there is a reasonable showing for success and that they are going to break away and of Mrs. May Davis. follow Roosevelt into the new progressive party in any considerable numbers. ## CAUGHT A TARTAR

By ARNOLD DUNCAN

A man in a pepper and salt suit and a felt hat got on a train at a way station, settled himself comfortably in his seat, took a morning paper from his pocket and began to read. When the conductor came around for his ticket he thrust his hand into his pocket for his wallet and looked very much chagrined. Then he went through his other pockets, and, not finding it, he said:

"Conductor, just before leaving my hotel this morning I changed my suit. putting the one I had been wearing with my money in the coat pocket in my trunk. What's worse, my trunk did not reach me at the station and is to come by a later train. If you'll let me go through to B., when we got into the station I'll telephone for a friend to bring me my fare and will give it to you.'

"Ticket," was the conductor's inconic reply.

"I have said all I have to say," con tinued the passenger. "I have no money to pay now, but I'll have plenty at the end of the route."

"You'll have to pay your fare or get off." "Not here, I trust, in this swampy country. You will at least carry me to the next station." "Not unless you pay your fare from the one where you got on." "Are your orders such as warrant you in such inhuman action?"

"Our orders are to put those who re fuse to pay fares off the train." "Well," said the passenger ruefully

"you'll have to put me off. I've left my money behind and have nothing to pay with."

The conductor pulled the bell, and the train stopped. The passenger made no resistance, but walked to the platform and got off into a swamp. The train went on, leaving him standing on the track looking after it. Then, first looking up and down the line of the road, he started on foot to pursue his

A few days later the passenger who couldn't pay his fare went into the offices of the road and asked to see the general superintendent. He walted half an hour, then was usbered into the room of a sleek looking man who asked him what he could do for him. He told the story of being put off the train and said be had come to effect a settlement for damages or he would sue for them. The superintendent said that if he would call in at room No. 7 all claims. The passenger went in there, had a talk with the claim officer. who got out of him all the information he desired, asked him what he would settle for, got him to put it in writing. took his address and said he would write him about the matter.

The passenger never heard from him. Not long after this it was evident field that there was manipulation in the stock of the road. No one, not even the president, could find out who was at the bottom of it. The price of the securities would go up a bit, then gradually sag, then rise again. But the general tendency was upward. The affairs of the road were known only to a few, who could see no reason for an advance. Indeed, business was falling off dreadfully. Two feeders. one at either terminal, were diverting their business to other roads. Then the price of the stock began to go down like lead. Finally it reached a point where the fluctuation ceased

The president of the road communicated with the feeders, asking what had caused them to divert their business from his line to others. He received no satisfaction Neverthelesthe diversion ceased and trade began to flow again over the line where it had flowed originally. The president was puzzled. He sent for some of the principal stockholders and asked them if they knew anything about the matter. They didn't, but admitted that during the recent flurry in the stock they had sold most of their holdings. One morning the president took up a newspaper and read in the financial columns that a new railroad magnate had appeared John Talcott, a man who had achieved some success at reorganizing roads in the west, had come east and with associates had bought a controlling interest in two lines, and it was suspected that he had picked up in open market a majority of the stock of a connecting link between the two. That connecting link the president knew to be his own line. That morning, when he went to his office, he found a note from the new rallroad star inviting the president to call upon him. He did so and found the party so busy that he was obliged to wait an hour before he could gain admittance. When admitted he saw a plain western man, who said to him in a plain western fashion: "Next month occurs the annual election of directors of your road. Twothirds of the stock belongs to me and my friends. I have sent for you to give you notice that neither your serv ices nor those of your principal officers will be needed for the ensuing year. If you will inquire of your find my name there as one who offered | me instead of hlm?" to settle damages for being put off one of your trains for a few bundred dol-

"Had I known," said the president, aghast. "I would have"-"But you did not know. I was one of those defenseless creatures-the pub-

HOW TO WIN A GIRL

By EMERY R. TALBOT

"Kent," said Edgar Wharton, "I wish you would tell me how to win a girl. You have lots of luck with girls. and everybody says It's because you know how to treat them."

"Oh, it's easy enough if you know how to do it," said Kent Martin.

you will be so good I'd like to have needed places, depends much of you put me on how to do the trick. I don't mind telling you that-in confidence, of course-she's Maggie Sei fridge."

Kent Martin restrained an expression of surprise that came very near breaking forth of its own accord and

"Maggie Selfridge, eh? Maggie is a nice girl Has she given you any encouragement?"

"There's the trouble. I know so little about girls that I don't know whether the way she treats me means anything or not."

"They are queer creatures and no mistake. Well, I'll give you a pointer on Maggie. She is one of the kind that need to be handled without gloves oc casionally You might get into a bit of a wrangle about something. She is very positive in her opinions, and you must be just as positive as she and let her understand that she's got to back down'

"I shouldn't think that would make her love me.' "Not that alone, but the making up Besides, a girl doesn't care for the man she can wind around her finger. She wants to be managed with a curb bit. spurs and a riding whip."

After this homily on the art of love Wharton proceeded to put it into practice. The first time he went to see Maggie they got into an argument as to whether the world was getting better or getting worse.

"I think it's getting better," said

"It is getting worse," said Wharton in a tone indicating that his statement was not to be disputed.

Maggie looked up at him, surprised 'Why do you say that?" she asked. "You wouldn't understand me if told you. Women don't know anything about logical sequences. "Oh, they don't?"

"I never knew one that did." "I will convince you that I do will give you a categorical syllogism. You tell me that I am not logical in a very rude fashion. I tell you that without an apology I don't care for he would find the official who adjusted shy further acquaintance with you These are the premises. The resultant > is a separation between us." Wharton smiled. "That's what you call logic, is it?" he said contemptu-

"The conclusion is fact," she replied and, rising, swept out of the room, leaving the young man master of the matter to be brought about-the making up? He hadn't thought of that and sought his coacher.

Martin listened to his account of the affair and at the end said that he had made a good beginning; all he had to do was to follow it up properly. "You don't want to pay any more attention to her," he said, "till she shows signs of weakening You can tell me just how she treats you from this on, and when I see anything that looks like a desire for a makeup I'll explain it to you. You wouldn't recognize it your self."

"Why not?" "Because it's more likely to be a display of bitterness than a direct ex pression of repentance." "I see."

But weeks passed, and there was nothing for Wharton to report to his coach. When the former met Miss Selfridge she spoke to him but coolly and did not make the slightest advance toward a reconcillation. But one day he was surprised to receive a note asking him to come and see her. Somehow he had lost confidence in Martin's theories as to how to win a woman and did not believe from the tone in which the note was written that it was for the purpose of drawing him back into the fold of her friendship. In fact, he was ready to eat humble pie

"I never supposed," she said to him, "that I should like as big a fool as Wharton stood speechless, "I only got at the bottom of your behavior yesterday. Kent Martin told his sister; her sister told Ethel Jones, and Ethel told me."

"W-w-what did she tell you?" "That Kent was instructing you how to make love." Wharton stood the picture of embarrassment. His face was as red as a boiled lobster. "Do you know what Kent did the other evening?"

"No. What?" "Had he not taken this mean advantage of you I would not tell you. He proposed to me." "The deuce he did!"

"Meanwhile he was telling you what to do to effect a breach between us. official in charge of claims you will If you wanted me why didn't you tell "I didn't know"-

"Your stupidity is the most attractive thing about you. But when you have occasion to tell me that"-

He had occasion to tell her immediately that he loved her and to ask her to be his wife. And she accepted him at once.
