

One of the Most Sacred Things in Life

Is that little band of gold which signifies marriage. To the bride, it is the key to all happiness in the world—her constant companion through life. What a sense of satisfaction to him who sells a wedding ring, well knowing that years hence, the same hand withered with age, will wear his ring exhibiting little signs of wear. To the jeweler who sells this ring comes the respect and confidence so essential to success in this particular field of endeavor. No ring contains gold so thoroughly wrought, so thoroughly worked on the grain to withstand wear, as does this ring. We have the Engagement Ring, the Wedding Ring, the Birthday Ring, the Baby Ring. In fact all kinds of rings. Let us show you.

Notice.

Bring in your shoe slips dated Oct. 29th. Hub Shoe Dept.

A very enjoyable Halloween party was held at the Hansen home Friday evening by a number of young people. Games, music and Halloween tricks furnished amusement for the evening. A nicely prepared lunch suitable to the day was served at a late hour.

The high school foot ball team took the game from the Kearney Military Academy on the local gridiron Friday afternoon. Touch downs were made during the game by Westburg, Ryan, Lambert, Norris and Lincoln numbering eight in all. The score was 53 to 7 and the large crowd of students and others who attended cheered the local boys on to victory. North Platte's players out-classed the Kearney boys from the beginning of the game and the work of Westburg and Ryan deserves special mention as does that of Captain Norris. The team this year is stronger and better than ever and they are confident of winning the remainder of this season's games.

Increases Area of Store.

The rear addition to the room occupied by the Weingand store has been completed, with the exception of the metal ceiling, and has been shelved and stocked with goods. This additional area, 30x30 feet, became a necessity by reason of the increased business and the consequent need of room to accommodate the increased stock. One year ago this week, Mr. Weingand opened his store, and the business transacted during the twelve months borders on the phenomenal; far exceeding Mr. Weingand's expectations. There's a reason—you can easily discover the why by examining the goods and learning the prices.

Work Begins on New Round House.

Work on the new round house, the first of the many terminal improvements to North Platte, began last week, and the site presents a scene of activity. Sixty laborers are employed at present, and this force is being increased as fast as men apply for work. The first work being done is the construction of the cement stall pits, of which there are twenty-eight, and when these are completed the foundation for the round house proper and the brick work will begin.

Many carloads of brick, crushed rock, iron pipe, lumber and other material are on the ground, several buildings for the housing of material and for use as workshops and offices have been erected, and several stationary engines for various purposes are on the site.

A number of teams are employed hauling sand and plowing the necessary excavations, and these with the sixty laborers, the members of the engineering corps on the ground and the gang bosses, make a total of nearly one hundred men on the job. The pay roll for all employed will be in the neighborhood of $2,000 per week.

Some Cabbage.

Omar Ross, who lives in the Birdwood country, brought to town the latter part of last week a head of cabbage which trimmed of the outer leaves weighs twenty-seven pounds. This is supposed to be only an average head of the cabbage raised by Mr. Ross, and it wasn't grown for exhibition purposes, either.

Conklin Comes to North Platte.

W. A. Conklin, who has been storekeeper for the Nebraska division of the Union Pacific at Omaha, has been transferred to this city as a member of the engineering department. Mr. Conklin's duties will be connected with the construction of the new round house and other terminal improvements.

Attendance is Small.

Dick Metcalf, editor of Bryan's Commoner, and one of the brightest men in the state, delivered a political address at the Lloyd Friday evening to an audience of less than a hundred. Those who heard the address say it was a good one from a democratic viewpoint. Mr. Metcalf said the lack of interest in politics in North Platte was no greater than in other Nebraska towns he had visited.

Greeks Hurrying Home.

Last Thursday a special train of fifteen coaches loaded with Greeks passed east, and the following day four coaches filled with men of the same nationality were attached to one of the regular trains. These Greeks are hurrying back to their native country to take arms against Turkey. They pay their own expenses back to their native land. The wholesale departure of the Greeks from all sections of the United States has made a perceptible shortage in laborers.

"The Fortune Hunter."

"The Fortune Hunter," Winchell Smith's comedy, which comes to the Keith next Saturday evening is one of the choicest offerings in the line of comedy unfolded upon the American stage in many seasons. It's genuinely humorous types, familiar to residents of small towns, is delightfully amusing and interesting, and at the same time points out a moral to youths. "The Fortune Hunter," Nat Duncan, whose only asset is that he is a college graduate, with a room mate who is a successful broker and is willing to "stake" him. The broker, Henry Kellogg, finally tires of the generosity. Also, he has in mind the future of young Duncan. Therefore, Kellogg maps out a program for the ne'er do well. "Go to some small country town, cut out drinking, smoking and cussing, dress plain, but in the very best taste, seek employment, go to church, and in a very short time the richest girl in town is sure to propose to you. In order to start you right I will advance you a loan sufficient to last you for a month. After you have won the heiress pay me back my loan and $1000 in addition. This, I think, a fair business proposition." All of this unfolded very amusingly in the first act. Act 2 shows a typical drug store of a town the size of Radville, Pa. Nat Duncan is a clerk with all thoughts of past luxury at the expense of his Wall street broker forgotten. Sem Graham, a lovable old druggist, while working on inventions that never "panned out" let his shop run down and into debt until Blinky Lockwood, the village banker who holds a mortgage on the place threatens to sell. Duncan out of "stake 2" lifts the mortgage and orders stock for the store for which old Graham makes him an equal owner. It is here that he meets the heiress who is to propose, but he is smitten with Betty Graham, the demure daughter of the druggist. He knows he is not playing the game of finance and love outlined to him by his broker friend, but he really is in love with the druggist's daughter. Act 3 shows the results of his business acumen. The old drug store is transformed into the "finest in the state." Here Kellogg appears to collect his loan and the fee. Also appears Betty Graham just from college where the profits of the new drug store sent her. Duncan agrees to pay Kellogg but refuses to marry the heiress. Kellogg knows the reason. Act 4 shows the Graham home purchased by the sale of an invention, and in the pouring rain Betty agrees to marry Nat.
