North Platte School of Music.

Affiliated with University School of Music, Lincoln, Nebraska, Elizabeth Bonner-Cramer, director. All the principal branches of applied and theoretical music taught by competent teachers. The arts are by no means neglected in North Platte and in touching on our musical interests we desire to make special mention of the North Platte School of Music, the leading institution of its character in this part of the state. This has been indeed a decided advantage to our thriving town and we are fortunate surely in having this establishment with us. That our people appreciate the excellent instruction received here is shown by the fact that there are about fifty pupils already enrolled and the number is growing fast. Yet, the North Platte School of Music has been here but a year.

There is nothing that educates and tones up the finer feelings of our nature like music. Show us the family where parents and children are accustomed to gather together in song and we will show you a household where peace and love abide and vice has no abiding place. The social and other advantages of a knowledge of music are so many and so evident that we will not refer to them here and nowadays we have in North Platte opportunities for acquiring a musical education that should be eagerly grasped.

Here are taught piano, voice, violin, theory, harmony and analysis and there is no need whatever of going beyond town for instruction in music as a thorough and complete education can be obtained right here.

There are several teachers, all true artists of talent and attainment, and no pains are spared to develop the capacity of pupils. The best methods are used and many excellent musicians and singers are being developed in this community.

Mrs. Cramer received her own training here and at the university and also takes lessons from the famous Sherwood of Chicago. She is particularly successful with beginners and her place in musical circles is one of which she may well feel proud.

Her art is marked by absolutely correct technique and deep feeling and she puts her heart and soul into her efforts with her scholars. An artist such as this estimable, cultured lady would be welcome in any city.

The North Platte School of Music deserves on its merits all the good things we can say for it and its success is very gratifying to all people.

We understand that Mrs. Cramer will later take a special course abroad.

At 8 o'clock last evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Foley, 3901 Manheim Road, their daughter, Helen, was married to Mr. Frederick M. Lamson of Boston. Before the entrance of the bridal party Mrs. P. E. McCarthy played on the harp "I Love You Truly," Lobengrin's "Wedding March," and during the ceremony "The Angels' Serenade." The Rev. Jefferson D. Ritchey of St. Paul's Episcopal church officiated, the bride being given in marriage by her father. There were no attendants.

The ceremony was in the living room before the mantle, which was banked with palms, pink Killarney roses and white stevia, with candelabra at either end. In the dining room the decorations were carried out in pink and white, tiny baskets of pink roses and lilies of the valley encircling the wedding cake on the dining table.

The bride's gown was fashioned of ivory charmeuse satin, with bodice of rose point lace. A cascade of rose point and duchess lace extended from the waist to the bottom of the skirt, ending in a satin rose. Her veil, in cap effect, of rose point lace, was wreathed in lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of lavender orchids and lilies of the valley.

A LAST WORD.

On leaving this thriving, progressive city, we take pleasure in testifying to the generous support that has been accorded our efforts and we thank the good people of North Platte for the kindness they have shown the "stranger within the gates."

On our part, we have done as we agreed, fulfilled our contract to the letter, and we trust the return to the subscribers for the slight expense involved will be many fold.

This is an age of publicity, the press is an ever increasing factor, and the discerning and intelligent members of a community are always the first to utilize this great lever in pushing their town to the front. It has been so here and we doubt not that North Platte will continue to grow and prosper as the years roll on.

The writer has eaten the bread of many lands and as he journeys far afield along the broad highway of life, this good old town will shine in letters of gold on the beds roll of remembrance.

Bearing away with us as we do many pleasant memories of our stay we will not fail to sound the praises of North Platte as we "pass along the line."

Farewell! A thousand thanks.

IGNATIUS I. MURPHY.
