Tornado Strikes Omaha

Today's Omaha Bee makes the following estimate of the storm damage:
Lives lost..... 140
Persons injured..... 240
Houses demolished..... 350
Churches wrecked..... 11
Schools wrecked..... 8
Buildings damaged..... 1250

The most appalling catastrophe in all Omaha's history befell the city just before sunset on a beautiful Easter day. A tornado swooped down on the city, coming from the southwest and tearing a path through to the north and east from two to three blocks wide and about four miles long.

This was through the best built residence section of the city, and hundreds of homes were smashed to powder or broken into bits by the terror of the air. Following the passage of the wind, almost as swiftly as thought, fire broke out, and in the twinkling of an eye almost, homes of happy, prosperous people were turned into piles of blazing debris, from which maimed and crippled victims of the storm god's wrath were dragged by rescuers. Other hundreds were taken out, dead.

It was some moments before the surviving could realize the nature of the terrible visitation, so quickly had it befallen. Those who were not caught in the course of the tornado, watched with fascinated gaze the passage of its destructive power, but even then seemed unable to grasp the fact that an awful devastation rode with the wind. Firemen were first to realize the condition, that existed, for calls from dozens of alarm boxes and from many surviving telephones came piling in in a confusion that was bewildering. But soon the department was set at its task, and the work of rescue was under way.

As minutes wore into hours, the terror of the storm's work grew. Electric lights were out of commission, telephones in the stricken section were not working, streets were blockaded by debris, and torrents of rain poured to obscure the search. Careful search was soon organized. The city police department was taxed to its utmost, and later the companies of the Nebraska national guard stationed in Omaha were called into service that aid might be given as quickly as possible, and that whatever of order might be restored could be had.

So extensive and so complete is the wreck, and so difficult the task of getting the exact facts, that only guesses can be made as to the extent of the calamity. The loss of life will mount well into the hundreds; the number of injured will be still greater, while the property loss will be millions.

Hundreds on hundreds of volunteers aided during the night in the search for the victims of the wreck; surgeons worked for hours at the hospitals, or in private homes where the injured were taken, giving attention to the sufferers. Through the dashing rain and in the mud and slush, the work of assistance was prosecuted. Families that escaped with their lives were taken into the homes of friends, or made their way down to the hotel district, there to seek shelter for the night. It was many hours before the homeless thousands were taken care of even temporarily.

Street cars were blown from the tracks and demolished while loaded and on their way to and from town; two and four-story brick buildings, theatres and churches were razed, residences stacked on top and littered amongst each other.

The loss was not only in Omaha, but several towns in the east part of Nebraska and also towns in Iowa suffered. In the Nebraska towns Berlin was wiped out of existence, six killed and a number injured; at Yutan ten were killed and a number injured, and scattering deaths are also reported. At Neola, Ia., three were killed, six at Council Bluffs and at Harlan seventy-five were injured.

A Modest Hero.

A French reporter encountered in a little village of the south of France a gardener who wore, pinned on his clean Sunday blouse, the ribbon of the Legion of Honor. Naturally the newspaper man desired to know how he got it. The gardener, who, like many of his trade, seemed to be a silent man, was averse to meeting an old and wearisome demand, but finally he began:

"Oh, I don't know how I did get it! I was at Hazelles with the rest of the battery. All the officers were killed; then down went all the noncommissioned officers—bang, bang, bang! By and by all the soldiers went down but me. I had fired the last shot and naturally was doing what I could to keep off the Bavarians.

"Well, a general came, and says he 'Where's your officers?'

"'All down,' says I.

"'Where's your gunners?' says he.

"'All down but me,' says I.

"'And you've been fighting—here all alone?' says he.

"'I couldn't let 'em come and get the guns, could I? I says, and then he up and put this ribbon on me, probably because there was nobody else there to put it on.'

Too Obliging.

When a Sixth avenue elevated train reached the Twenty-third street station an elderly and poorly dressed woman arose and walked slowly toward the door. She had reached the platform and was about to step off when a man noticed that she had left a paper parcel behind. "Hey! You forgot something," he shouted, but the woman never turned about. He jumped off the car and reached the woman's side as the gate banged and the train moved on. "Much obliged, but that isn't mine," said the woman. A sickly smile overspread the man's face as he held to the people who had witnessed the refusal of the parcel. "She's right; it belongs to me," and, seeing that some of the witnesses were incredulous, he said that the parcel contained a child's rubber coat, proving it by opening the parcel. He then joined in the laugh on himself.—New York Tribune.

Rope or Rifle.

The first legal execution by shooting to be carried out by civil authorities in America was at Salt Lake City in 1861, when William Cockroft, convicted of murder in the first degree, chose to be shot rather than hanged or beheaded. Under the laws of the territory of Utah a condemned man was permitted to select either of the three methods of his taking off, and when Utah became a state the choice was restricted to shooting or hanging. Of the executions in Utah in the last century only one man, a wife murderer, has chosen the noose. Utah was long the only American state that permitted an assassin any choice as to his means of exit from the world, but a few years ago Nevada passed a law giving a condemned man the option of the rope or the rifle.—Baltimore News.
