High Prices and the Tariff.

Democrats drive their trick for lowering the tariff "in order to reduce prices," just as if they really believed that the high cost of living was caused solely by the protective tariff. It must be admitted that they have made a good many people believe it, just as have certain financial doctors once convinced many that the low cost of living was due to closing the mints to the free coinage of silver.

The federal government's reports disclose the fact that on January 1, 1912, there were 58,000,000 head of cattle on American farms, as against 72,000,000 in 1907. Everybody knows, who is informed on the subjects, that there has been a decided diminution in the cattle supply, for one reason and another, in the last few years, just as people know that consumption of other staple articles is outstripping production. Unless the democrats can hope to win their case ultimately on sophistry, they are very foolish to begin it on that. The probabilities are that the general range of the cost of living will not be materially lowered by the forthcoming tariff act, in which event it will have been better for the democrats never to have made the claim.—Omaha Bee.

Financial students of the railway situation say that a serious car shortage this fall is inevitable if anything like a full crop of corn and wheat is raised. They show by the figures that a very large part of the railway earnings has been absorbed in taking up short-time notes and that a very small part of the earnings has been devoted to the purchase of new equipment. Car efficiency work was responsible in a large part for the manner in which equipment at hand was stretched over the business volume of last fall. Since then the purchase of new cars has not been heavy and the old cars are rapidly going out of commission.

Voting by mail was authorized by the late legislature, so that in future elections in Nebraska any qualified voter absent from his county by reason of necessities of his occupation can cast his ballot at any polling place where he may be and it will be mailed by the election clerk to the county clerk of the voter's home county where it will be counted by the canvassing board. This legislation will be especially appreciated by the many salesmen who in the performance of their duties are frequently away from their places of residence when elections occur.

Roosevelt was awarded six cents damages in his libel suit against Geo. A. Newett at Marquette, Mich., which closed Saturday. Newett went on the stand and said he had been impressed that an injustice had been done Colonel Roosevelt in the publication of the article charging him with drunkenness, and he deeply regretted it. Roosevelt then asked the judge to instruct the jury to bring in merely nominal damages.

She also denies that her son Harley is as bad a boy as he has been painted, and further says that the report that he had accompanied the Walz boy on a trip to Ogden is not true.
