GIRLS QUIT SCHOOL

Government Looks Up Cause for Their Non-Attendance.

Investigation Shows They Do Not Abandon Opportunity for Education and Go to Work Because Parents Need the Money.

Washington.—The idea that children leave school to go to work because their parents need the money, is vigorously combated in a bulletin issued by the United States bureau of education. The authors of the bulletin have made a careful study of trade and labor conditions among girls in Worcester, Mass., preliminary to the establishment of a trade school for girls. They find that from one-half to three-fourths of the girls at work in the factories could have had further schooling if they had wanted to or if their parents had cared to insist upon it.

The survey showed that the number of girls between 14 and 16 years of age who leave school is constantly increasing. During the past five years many more girls between those ages left the Worcester schools than can be accounted for by increase in population. Only about 17 per cent. of them had finished the grammar schools; most of them left in the sixth and seventh grades.

Why did the girls leave school? Various reasons were assigned by the girls themselves. Some 30 girls said they "did not like school;" "could not get along with the teacher;" "were not promoted," or "wanted to go to work." Two were working to help pay for a piano. One of these was a cash girl of 14 years, who had left the ninth grade to go to work in a department store for $2, later $2.50 a week. Another was a girl of 15 from the eighth grade, who went to work in a corset factory for $1 and rose to $4.82. Still another girl was taking music lessons and contributing to the payment on the piano.

Twenty-seven girls were found at home. In some cases they had left to help in housework, while a few had left at a time of temporary stress and then had not returned to school. Four girls had changed places with the mother, who worked in a corset factory, laundry, or some such place, while the girl whose wage-earning power was small kept house for the mother of the children.

Curious differences as to what the parents thought they could afford were discovered: The mother of a family of eight children, living in apparently direct poverty, would have been glad to have sacrificed and pinched still further to have had her daughter stay in school longer. The mother of another family of six, living in a comfortable apartment house, with hardwood floors, piano, and other luxuries, said her daughter wished to stay in school longer, but the burden of supporting the family was too heavy for the father to bear alone; so the girl was taken out of school to go to work. A visit to a Swedish family revealed a carpenter and his wife, a washerwoman, who had just built and owned a new three-story apartment house. Yet the 15-year-old daughter with a seventh-grade education had been sent to work in a paper goods factory at $2 a week. "The question 'Why did you leave school?' was put to some 335 more mature workers in the corset trade. Ninety-one per cent. of these women had left school between the ages of 13 and 16, and fully 50 per cent. because of their dislike of school or because they wanted to go to work. Of 74 workers in a clothing factory 85 per cent. had left school between the ages of 13 and 16, 25 per cent. of their own volition."

In the opinion of the authors of the bulletin, conditions such as were found in Worcester emphasize the imperative need for special training of a practical sort for girls between the ages of 13 and 15. In the main the children left school simply because they disliked the school work. Not getting the kind of training they might have liked and would have profited by, they blindly joined the army of shifting, inefficient, discontented girls that go from one monotonous factory job to another, and, because of their lack of training, rarely rise above the class of low-paid, unskilled workers.

Capt. J. F. Pelletier of the insurance patrol, rolled from his bed into his clothes, slid down the pole into the apparatus room and within a few minutes was leading his squad against the flames. Finally the flames were subdued, and the captain stood watching the smoldering ruins.

He heard a growl and a whining yelp. A dog was chasing a monkey down Central avenue. The monkey saw the captain, so did the dog, and immediately they forgot their mutual disregard and attacked him. The captain's right foot shot out and the monkey went sprawling through the air. The foot kicked out again—and the captain woke up—in his room on the second floor of the patrol building on Charlotte street, near Eleventh.

His foot pained him. On examination he found it covered with blood. Three toes had been mashed and it was five minutes before he discovered he had been kicking the wall beside his bed in his dream.

BOILED EGGS BETRAY THEM

Nationality of Diners is Shown in Their Various Method of Eating.

Sherlock Holmes might have figured this out, but he did not! The average Englishman will always demand his egg boiled just three minutes, then he places it in an egg cup, just large enough to have the egg fit it, taps the top of the shell, and removes the broken shell with his fingers. The egg is eaten a spoonful at a time.

A Frenchman, much like the Englishman, likes his eggs of three minutes, exactly. He then "peels" them, places them in a glass, stirs and mixes well together with salt, pepper and butter. He makes a practice of dipping bread into the mixture, and eating it along with the eggs.

A Spaniard wouldn't think of letting his egg boil more than one minute. He then breaks it, and lets the contents run into a glass, and consumes it as if he were drinking a glass of wine.

An egg is only fit in an Italian's estimation when it has been placed in cold water, and removed just as the water begins to boil. He then breaks it, pours it on a plate, and proceeds to sop it up with bread.

The German, like the Italian, demands his eggs as near the liquid state as possible. He breaks his eggs in an unsightly cup, and scoops the liquid out as if it were soup.

The American is about the only one who boils his eggs boiled hard. When they are served up to him, he knives them in half, removes the contents into a glass, after which he adds a plentiful supply of pepper, butter and salt. He then mashes the eggs fine, mixing them well with the spices, and eats them with his toast.

ITCHING AND BURNING

Iberia, Mo.—"I was troubled with scalp eczema for about five years and tried everything I heard of, but all of no avail. The doctors told me I would have to have my head shaved. Being a woman, I hated the idea of that. I was told by a friend that the Cuticura Remedies would do me good. This spring I purchased two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap. After using one box of Cuticura Ointment I considered the cure permanent, but continued to use it to make sure and used about one-half the other box. Now I am entirely well. I also used the Cuticura Soap.

"The disease began on the back of my head, taking the form of a ringworm, only more severe, rising to a thick, rough scale that would come off when soaked with oil or warm water, bringing a few hairs each time, but in a few days would form again, larger each time, and spreading until the entire back of the head was covered with the scale. This was accompanied by a terrible itching and burning sensation. Now my head is completely well and my hair growing nicely." (Signed) Mrs. Geo. F. Clark, Mar. 25, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."
