Little Child Found.

A little boy three years of age was found Tuesday evening at about 6:30 wandering around alone on East Front street near the North Platte produce house. He seemed perfectly contented and was pulling a little wagon around, seemingly enjoying it very much. He was picked up by a larger boy and taken to Tramp's grocery store and an attempt was made to find where he belonged. He could not talk, other than to say "mamma" and that he was cold. One of the employees called up the telephone office and asked if anyone had inquired there for a little boy and found that no one had missed him yet. In a few minutes they were called by the child's mother, Mrs. McHugh on West Front street, and she came to the store after the boy. He had been playing out in the yard and wandered away and was about a mile from home when found.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Gill of the Garfield vicinity, arrived in the city the first of the week for a visit of a week or so with their daughter Mrs. S. M. Derryberry.

PONDEROUS SEA ELEPHANTS.

They Have Two Foot Trunks and Flippers Tipped With Claws.

That which is believed to be the last herd of sea elephants known to exist is to be found at Guadalupe Island, off the west coast of Mexico. In the herd there are now only about thirty specimens.

The sea elephant is an important link in the chain of evolution and is the largest of all fin footed animals. The adult male is about twenty-two feet in length and is about eight feet high when propped up on his front flippers in a natural position. These great bulls weigh from two to three tons and have a trunk, or proboscis, which, when relaxed, hangs down over the mouth about two feet. In the end of this the nostrils are placed rather wide apart, and when they breathe their whole mass trembles in tiny undulations to the very end.

The flippers are thick and tipped with heavy claws. There is a tall about one foot and a half long, separated horizontally into two divisions. This tall acts as a propeller, to resist the huge creature when he comes in through the breakers. He hoists his back flippers and tall so as to catch the full sweep of the waves, and then allows himself to be washed up on the beach.

Course, bristly hair grows sparsely from the back along the body, and a tough protecting crust of flesh reaches like a shield from the lower jaw down over the chest and round to the back of the neck. This biblike affair is nature's provision for protection in time of battle. The male fights viciously in the mating season, and the chest protector prevents much loss of life.

Sea elephants live on various kinds of small fish and use the trunk to seize them with. Afterward the food is transferred to the mouth precisely as elephants manage it.

EGGS BY THE YARD.

Korea Also Produces Oysters That Weigh Ten Pounds Each.

While in the orient a correspondent had occasion to call on friends who lived near Seoul, the principal city of Korea. He tells the following story: One morning my hostess, while giving orders for the necessary things from the market for the day, mentioned four yards of eggs. I accompanied the steward that day on his marketing trip, and when the eggs were asked for the grocer reached down in a barrel and brought out the end of a large straw rope. He measured off the required length on the counter, just as a dry goods store clerk would measure off cloth, rolled it up and put it in the basket without a smile. The eggs were inside of this hollow straw rope, with a string tied on the outside of it between each egg. This effectually protected the eggs from being broken while handling.

Another day my hostess ordered two "small" oysters for dinner. This order caused me to wonder a little, for I knew that there would be seven to nine, besides the servants, but when the oysters arrived all was explained, for one weighed four and a half pounds, and the other five pounds. On inquiry I was informed that some of the oysters on the northern side of Korea weigh as much as ten pounds.—Christian Science Monitor.

Bathing and Bellowing.

Primitive man hollered his water with hot stones. That was not the only use he made of them, at any rate, if he was a Scythian. The Scythian practice described by Herodotus has been claimed by some as the first recorded case of smoking. Having spoken of a kind of hemp that grew in the country, Herodotus proceeds: "Now, the Scythians, taking the seed of this hemp, go into their tents and then throw the seed upon the stones heated white hot. As it is thrown on it is burnt into smoke, producing so much that no Greek vapor bath could surpass it. And the Scythians, delighting in it, follow. This takes the place of washing for them." It seems as though they had discovered the Turkish bath and the cigarette.

The Widow's Dower.

It is certain that "dower," the estate for life which the widow acquires at her husband's death, was not known among the early Saxons. In the laws of King Edmund the widow is directed to be supported wholly out of the personal estate. Dower is generally ascribed to the Normans, but it was first introduced into the feudal system by Emperor Frederick II, who was contemporary with the English Henry III, about 1250.

The Usual Way.

"It would never do for the farmers to get into the financial business of the nation."
"Why not?"
"From force of habit they would always be waiting to water their stock."
—Baltimore American.

Home Finance.

"Wombat, loan me $5. It's for an investment you are interested in."
"What investment of yours am I interested in?"
"My daughter wants to buy a birthday present for your son."
—Pittsburgh Post.

Superfluos.

Tommy—Pop, what do we mean by superfluos? Tommy's Pop—Superfluos, my son, means—well, it's like a bachelor giving advice to a married man.—Philadelphia Record
