Child Worker in the City.

Miss Lucina Kyle, of Hastings, superintendent of the Hastings district of the Nebraska National child saving association, arrived in the city Saturday and will remain here for several weeks to promote her work in this city. She has with her a little girl for whom she is seeking a home. Miss Kyle spoke Sunday morning at the Methodist church and intends visiting all the other churches while in this city. She gave a fine address Sunday morning and very clearly outlined her work. Her work consists of private soliciting for funds for the organization and the placing of children. She will also attempt to strengthen the local board of the organization and will visit the different homes in the city. All her work of raising funds is done through personal solicitation and she makes no public appeal for money.

High School Presents Play.

The high school entertainment and play Saturday evening was very much enjoyed by a large audience. The musical selections by the orchestra and glee club at the opening of the program were good and especially the selections by the glee club. The glee club has made very good headway and is a credit to the school and to Mr. Flowers, who has in charge. The boys sang two numbers and encores and did them very well.

The play was a very clever and humorous parody of "The Merchant of Venice," and the actors carried their parts well. Jay Smith as Shylock and Sidney McFarland as Launcelot Gobbo played exceptionally well. Sybil Gantt as Miss Threedice, a Latin teacher, and Tyrone Winkelman as Mrs. Gobbo were also very good. The entertainment was well worth the admission price and all present enjoyed it very much.
