Another Victim of Carbolic Acid.

Sylvester W. Hodges, proprietor of the brick livery barn at the corner of Pine and Front streets, committed suicide Tuesday afternoon by taking carbolic acid. He had been despondent for some time on account of financial troubles, but was exceptionally jolly all Tuesday morning. At about 2:30 he went to one of the drug stores and purchased a two-ounce bottle of carbolic acid, stating that a horse had been kicked by a another that was rough shod and that he wanted the acid to cleanse the wound. He stood around the store for several minutes talking and joking, and was seemingly in good spirits. Shortly after 3 o'clock word was received that he was dead.

No motive other than financial troubles is known for his act, although he was an habitual drunkard and had taken the cure twice without any success. He purchased the barn about a year ago and there was still a mortgage on it. The mortgage had been due for some time and the man holding it was in the city Monday and told Mr. Hodges that it was due, but stated that he would give more time on account of the scarcity of money at the present time.

Mr. Hodges' oldest son found him shortly before he died. He had gone alone into one of the back stalls in the barn and had taken the acid without anyone suspecting it. He drank the entire contents of the bottle. Medical attention was immediately summoned, but he died just as the doctor arrived. The body was taken to the morgue immediately. The face was all drawn and the expression well showed the agony he must have experienced when the acid took its effect. The inside of his mouth and lips were terribly burned and his drawn lips and half-closed eyes gave evidence of the terrible pain caused from the burning.

Mr. Hodges leaves a wife and six children, his mother and two brothers. All the children are under age and the youngest is a baby. The oldest son is a young man and works at the barn. The brothers arrived yesterday from the eastern part of the state and the body will be shipped today to Nemaha where burial will be made.

A case was filed Tuesday afternoon in the county court by Elizabeth Bratt against Mr. Hodges for forcible detention. In the complaint she alleges that she served notice on March 2nd for Mr. Hodges to vacate the barn building and that he had neglected to do so. She states that his lease was run out on February 25 and asked for judgment and restitution of the premises.

Found Wandering on Tracks.

A woman by name of Mrs. Hamm was brought to this city Tuesday from Maxwell where she was found wandering around apparently without any knowledge of what she was doing. She was seen at that place wandering around on the tracks and it was feared that she would be run down by a train. She was taken to the hotel and Sheriff Salisbury was called and went after her. Her mind was apparently much demented as she would say nothing only that she was going to her parents who live in the eastern part of the state, and that her home was in North Platte. Her clothes were wet and she was very scantily dressed. After she was brought to this city it was discovered that her home was on North Locust street north of the tracks. Evidence would indicate that she had walked from this place to Maxwell and had waded the river. She was turned over to her husband for care. She is a young woman about twenty years of age.

Mrs. Hamm attempted to commit suicide Monday by taking laudanum but was discovered by her husband and the poison was taken from her. She gave no cause for wanting to kill herself, and as her home life is apparently happy, it is thought that some hallucination has possessed her and that she is losing her mind. Her condition is such that she will require constant care and watching.
