Rhodes Bound Over. Skips Town.

"Dusty" Rhodes was brought before Judge Grant Tuesday morning on the charge of impersonating an officer and bound over to the district court on bonds $400. The case was finished shortly after 12 o'clock and he was given until four o'clock to try and raise the necessary bonds. After that he was heard of no more until Wednesday morning when it was discovered that he left on a night train for parts unknown. He had been in hiding all afternoon.

The case against him was very strong and the prosecution was carried on by Attorney James T. Keefe in the absence of the county attorney. The evidence brought out the fact that there were some rather serious charges against him after he had been dealt with for the charges preferred against him by Chief Frazier.

A woman by the name of Mrs. Handley appeared against him as the chief witness for the state and testified that he had passed himself off as an officer and that he had maltreated her. Two other witnesses were called who testified that Rhodes had boasted to them the day following the affair as to how he outwitted a woman. Some other convicting evidence was also introduced by the state.

Methodist Brotherhood Meets.

The men's brotherhood of the Methodist church met Tuesday evening at home of the president, Wilson Tout, 621 West Third street, and enjoyed a pleasant evening. The largest attendance yet on record was out to this meeting, owing to the fact that the president had sent out letters to all the wives to take upon themselves the responsibility of getting the men out. The evening was spent with the discussion of the issues before the voters at the next election, and at a late hour nice refreshments were served. The men report the jolliest time they have yet had, and several of them reported that they had been thrown bodily out of the house and locked out, having been given the alternative of hanging around outside or going to the brotherhood meeting.
