Lawn Fertilizer.

A splendid fertilizer for lawns, rec-ommended by the Department of Agri-culture is composed of the following:

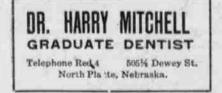

Sodium Nitrate 4 parts Powd. Blood Albumen 8 parts

Mix with 40 gallons of water or mix dry and sprinkle oxer 400 square feet of lawn

While these salts are the principal ingredients that enrich the soil that manure is composed of, yet the fact is the cost is less than one-third. Perfectly sanitary. Without dandelions and grub worms, is alone a good reason why it should be used in preference to manure.

Silhouette and Painting.

The art of painting begins inevitably with drawing-with expression by means of the point; the result-line. This every teacher and academy realizes and has to realize. More, every great school of painting has evolved from it. But this use of the point or drawing soon reaches its limitations, and the brush demands mass, or perhaps it is more correct to say that mass demands the brush. The floating of masses on to canvas or paper, with its edges holding the outline of the form, is silhouette. Silhouette, in other words, is the basis of all mass impressions. Without a sense of silhouette we can utter no large and sublime moods. Yet, strange to say, the small part given to silhouette in the teaching of the art of painting in academiesindeed, more often the utter lack of it-has always struck me as estraordinary. - Haldane Macfall in "T. Why are people invariably comparing the sexes? They are not to be compared. The man usually has an advantage in his field, a woman in hers. And yet these fields are continually overlapping, or, rather, there are many exceptions. For instance, a woman will at times show a man's bravery. The unexpected is more liable to happen with woman than man. Usually a woman is more resourceful than a man. The following story illustratesome of the points above noted, the one most particularly illustrated being that one can never know what a we man will do in an emergency:

One afternoon two friends, James Wakefield and Henry Smythe, while waiting to take out their best girls in an automobile, engaged in a dialogue as to woman's courage. Wakefield was engaged to Lucy Trowbridge, while Smythe's fiancee was Helen Ormsby. This is what the men said:

Henry-Your girl has one thing about her that I like. She is fearless. Jlm-How do you know that?

Henry-Oh, I've seen her out at sea n rough weather. She was very plucky. Jim-You can't tell much about wo men's pluck because they'resstupl' about appreciating real danger, I don't expect bravery in a woman, and wouldn't value Lucy any higher if I knew she were capable of standing up in the face of a volley of musketry.

Henry-If Helen should show a lack of nerve I would despise her as much as I would a cowardly man.

Jim-I should consider her all the more womanly and the more to be loved.

The quartet started on their motor trip about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Henry had the wheel, and Jim sat beside him, the two girls occupying the rear seat. They lived in a large city and started out on one of those boulevards only to be found in large places. Having gone some twenty miles, they turned, reaching the city limits just about dusk. Henry stopped the car and got out to light the lamps. He was just outside the city limits, where the police were not plentiful, and in a lonely place in the road flanked by woods on either hand. He was lighting the lamps when lie heard a voice shout, "Hold up your hands!" and a man from either side advanced. covering the party with cocked revolv

Henry stood with a lighted match in his hand regarding the robbers with an expression of antagonism on his face and did not raise his hands till he had been ordered to do so a second time and been told that if he didn't obey a bullet would be put in his brain. Jim's hands went up on the first order. Helen was not able to obey, because she fainted dead away. Lucy was somewhat tardy in holding a hand aloft, but did not require a second command. Henry was ordered to resume his seat at the wheel All being in position to be plucked, a third man mounted the footboard and proceeded to relieve them of their valuables. Henry Smythe, though disgusted at being taken at such a disadvantage, had the good sense to permit himself to be robbed rather than risk being killed. Jim made no pretense of resisting, or even desired to, handing out his watch and chain and $27 in bills, besides change in his vest pocket. of his own accord. When the plunderer came to Helen he seemed to be conscience stricken at robbing a woman who was lying unconscious. At any rate, he passed her. Lucy's right hand was still pointing to the sky. It was ungloved, and the robber, seeing that there were no rings on it, jumped off the footboard with two gold watches and chains and some $60 that he had taken from the men. Then the robbers all disappeared in the woods. Henry turned and saw Helen in a dead faint. Lucy was sitting up straight enough, but seemed to have lost her tongue. She had neither screamed nor spoken since the episode commenced. The expression on Henry's face as he looked from one to the other was peculiar. "Lucy." he said, "what have you lost?"

It is comforting for the automobilist to know that wherever he goes he will probably find a telephone with country-wide Bell connections.

The telephone may be on a rural line in a little out-of-the-way farm house, or in a crossroads count store, but if it is connected to the Bell System, the traveler may talk to his home or office in the distant city, and explain his delay or announce the probable time of his return.

The Star Arcturus.

It is probable that the star Arcturus is one of the six greatest of all the stars in the sky. Notwithstanding its brightness, it is so far away from us that it is not displaced in position in the slightest measurable degree, as we change our position 180,000,000 miles in our annual journey around the sun. Could we be placed midway between Arcturus and our sun we would receive thousands of times more light and heat from the star than from our sun and this notwithstanding that the star's radiation is smothered by a dense blanket of metallic vapors. In spite of its immense distance the star is drifting slowly in a southwestward direction over the face of the sky, its motion changing its apparent position by an amount equal to the diameter of the moon in the course of about 1,000 years. So great an apparent motion must indicate an enormous velocity in space

According to geologists, Long Island affords particularly clear evidence as to the history of the great continental ice sheet which covered the northern states many thousand years ago. The southern margin of this great ice sheet extended to Long Island, it is said, and remained there for a long time, depositing a thick body of intermixed bowlders, sand and elay as a terminal moraine, which is now the "backbone" of the island. The ice moved southward and brought these materials from the north, dropping them at its melting edge. This peculiar method of deposition developed a very peculiar topography, consisting of an irregular aggregation of hummocks and hollows, which have produced the many beautiful details of configuration that make the higher parts of Long Island so attractive to lovers of nature. The most notable of these hollows in the morainal ridge is the one holding the picturesque Lake Ronkonkoma, which lies in a depression fifty feet below the surrounding ridges. Several other similar pits are eighty to eighty-five feet deep, and several of the large, irregu--Argonaut.

Nature's Little Ship.

While man makes the largest ocean vessels, nature makes the smallest. only in tropical seas, which has a sail. The part of the fish under the water looks like a mass of tangled threads. while the sall is a tough membrane shaped like a shell and measuring quite five inches and sometimes more across. The fish can raise or lower this sail at will. Wise sailors let this curiosity of nature alone, for each of the threads composing its body has the power of stinging, the results of which are very painful and often dangerous. This power defends it from porpoises, albatrosses and other natural enemies. It has no other means of locomotion than its sail, and when seen skimming bravely along the surface of the water it looks more like a child's toy boat than a living creature out in search of food .-- London Opin-1on

Asiatics Use Goatskin Churns.

Goatskin churns are the proper thing in the Asiatic deserts. They are the unique butter making contrivances of the world. These churns resemble gigantic footballs, varying in size according to the extent of the family. They are constructed of goatskin sewed together in the form of a ball, with the hair side in. Cream is run into these bags until they are about half full. and the balance of the space is filled with air from the churner's lungs. Then these churns are suspended from three sticks and a rocking motion begun. The air on the inside is calculated to aid coaxing the butter from the cream. After churning the product is strained through cloth, for the goat's hair has a tendency to shed during the violent operations.

A Check With a History.

A curious souvenir is preserved in the Bank of England in the shape of a note for £1,000 with which Admiral Lord Cochrane paid his fine when he was falsely accused of spreading with an interested object a rumor that Bonaparte was dead in 1814 so as to cause a rise in the price of stocks. The sum mentioned was raised in subscriptions of a penny by his Westminster constituents. The note is indorsed with the name of the intrepid but ill used salt and has inscribed on it a sentence in which he expresses the hope that one day he will prove his innocence and triumph over his accusers. That consummation was not effected until eighteen years later, when he was reinstated by William IV.-London Telegraph.
