

The Grand Promoter
A Stranger Plays Him a Low
Down Trick

There was some one outside of Major Crofoot's office door. A knock, knock, knock. "Come right in!" "I'm looking for the Major Crofoot that has all sorts of good things to invest in," said the caller. "Then you have come to the right place. Have a chair." "Thanks. Now, then, I don't wish to take up your valuable time. Have you got anything good on hand? I want something perfectly safe that will return 9 or 10 per cent on the money." "My dear sir, I have got half a dozen of the best things going. When you speak of 9 or 10 per cent dividends it makes me smile. I don't deal in such small fish. Anything I take hold of must pay 30 per cent or I drop it." "Good Lord!" ejaculated the caller as he sat up. "Thirty per cent at least, sir. What would you say to stocks paying dollar for dollar?" "But I'm willing to take 40 per cent," replied the man. "Gee whiz, but what man can ask for more than that?" "Very fair, very fair," loftily replied the major, "but nothing to brag of. Being you have come direct to the office I want to pick out something extra. Let me see. The Universal Glass Eye company paid 60 per cent dividends two years ago, but last year dropped down to 30. It will be still less than that this year on account of hard times. Lots of one-eyed people stick a patch over the eye and let it go at that. If you'd come in a month ago I could have let you in on the ground floor of the Magic Rat and Mouse Destroyer. The stock went like wildfire, and the last was sold at $200. We figure it will pay 400 per cent dividends for the next twenty years." "And I can't get in. Thunder, but why didn't I know about it! But you must have something for me," insisted the caller in anxious tones. "Let me see! Let me see! How absentminded I am this morning. Just as you knocked I was making up the incorporation papers for my last and best scheme. It's one that'll lay over all others. I was saving it to begin the year on." "Good, good! What is it? By George, old fellow, if you put me on to something good you shan't lose by it!" "You know what delicacies turtle soup and turtle steak are considered?" "I do." "And you know the high price frogs' legs bring?" "Yes." "Well, that's the basis of the Great Western company, just organized. We are going to rent nine square miles of Lake St. Clair flats and raise our frogs and turtles and can them on the spot. They will be canned in champagne, and the labels on the cans will be handsome enough to frame and hang in any one's parlor. Three turtle steaks and two dozen frogs' legs every can. Killing and canning take place every day. We shall control the market of the world." "What dividends do you figure on?" "Well, last night I was figuring on a straight 100 per cent, but this morning I thought I ought to make a little allowance. Many turtles die of homesickness, you know, and a certain per cent of the frogs are bound to jump the wire fences and get away. To be very safe and conservative I have put the dividends at 95 per cent. I think that is a rather neat figure, don't you?" "Great! Great Scott, I've been lending money at 6 per cent!" "How—how much were you thinking of investing?" asked the major in a voice that trembled in spite of himself. "Twenty thousand dollars perhaps." "And you—you will pay something down to secure the stock?" "A hundred dollars. Here's a check I'll indorse over to you, and I'll come in tomorrow and pay the balance and get the stock. By George, but I'm in luck! Just think of getting hold of something paying 95 per cent dividends! Why, my wife will think me crazy when I tell her about this. You won't let Morgan buy the whole thing up and freeze me out, will you?" "No. You shall have the stock." "And I'll remember you. I'll buy you a pearl pin out of the first dividend. If you want, when you get started, I'll show you how to catch frogs for canning. There's a peculiar way of getting hold of them by one hind leg. Ninety-five per cent! I can't help but dwell on it!" "Yes, it's a good thing," replied the major as he shoved the folded check into his vest pocket in a careless way. "You will be in tomorrow?" "Sure, Mike! If I was a Frenchman I'd kiss you for luck, but as I'm not we'll shake hands and I'll say, ta, tomorrow! Ninety-five per cent! Whoop!" "When he had gone the major walked up and down to calm his raging heart. It didn't seem possible. He couldn't credit his good luck. Then at last he took the check from his pocket and looked at it to see what bank it was drawn on. His eyes opened wide, and he uttered a moan and staggered to a seat. It was drawn in favor of "A. Sucker," indorsed by "Another Sucker" and signed by "Uncle Rube." Then the light went out, and the grand promoter bowed his head and knew the bitterness of the green persimmon.

MRS. DOLBY'S DEED
Pickle Barrel Suicide Threat Leaves Her Husband Unmoved.
By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

After supper, when Deacon Dolby took the kerosene can and started for the store, he left Mrs. Dolby singing the hymn that she had a home over there. She hadn't been so cheerful in many weeks. When the deacon returned an hour later there was no singing. The lamp on the kitchen table was turned low down, and the house seemed to be deserted. "Gone over to Brown's," said the deacon to himself as he turned up the wick. Then his eye caught sight of a note, and he half groaned. The note was brief and concise. It read: I have heard all about you and the bull calf, and you will find my drowned body in the pickle barrel down cellar. "Nice pickle she'll make," grunted the deacon as he proceeded to the sitting room and turned up the lamp there. He had brought with him four big apples. It was rather foolish of Mrs. Dolby to choose the pickle route to that better land when there were so many better ones, he thought. He had finished his first apple and begun peeling the second when Mrs. Dolby appeared in the kitchen door and in a hollow voice exclaimed: "Samuel Dolby, the dead speaks to you!" Samuel didn't jump out of his chair. He didn't even give a start of surprise. "Samuel, one day last fall, when you were pulling the carrots, a man came along the road with a bull calf. Do you remember it?" The deacon remembered, but he didn't admit that he did. "After a little talk with him you started off downtown with the two. I called and called you, but you never even looked back." It was true, but the deacon wasn't going to say so. He wasn't going to say anything at all. "When you got back home you had a skinned nose and was breathing hard. All you would say about it was that you fell down. Samuel Dolby, you lied to your confiding wife!" "While you were downtown this evening Mrs. White came in and told me all about it. It seems that the man was taking the bull calf to sell to the butcher. When he got there there was a dispute about the calf's weight. That was where you butted in. You never owned a bull calf in your life, but you had to butt in and offer to bet $2 to $1 that you could lift him." The deacon grinned, but the grin was hidden from Mrs. Dolby. "The man bet with you and you lost. You could no more lift that calf than you could lift a barn. You heaved and grunted and tugged. And when you claimed you had lifted it when you hadn't and you refused to hand over the bet both men called you a liar and the owner of the calf skinned your nose and chased you a quarter of a mile!" The deacon cringed, but chewed vigorously to hide it. He honestly believed that he had lifted the calf, but the others were against him. "There is the case, Samuel, and do you blame me for jumping head first into the pickle barrel?" The deacon had finished his third apple and he was full. He therefore shut and pocketed his jackknife and gave a sort of gulp to signify that he was full. "I thought I could die and not say anything about it," continued Mrs. Dolby. "but I just had to back out of that barrel and let you know that your perjury was discovered." "I have done my duty, Samuel, and I go back to my pickle barrel. I don't want the angels to say I was too hard on you, and so I will admit that I have heard of cases where men were half crazy about bull calves. That may have been what ailed you that day. If you think it was, why—why?" The deacon may have thought so, and he may have repudiated the suggestion with scorn, but he had a wise old head on his shoulders and maintained silence except for a yawn or two. "If you were bull calf crazy then I might forgive you if you got down on your knees." "Humph!" said the deacon to himself. "Samuel, you needn't mind about a large funeral for me. I deserve one, but I don't want to put you to needless expense. Being as I drowned myself in the pickle barrel, why not use that as my coffin?" The deacon may have thought it a good idea, but he didn't say so. There was a long minute of silence, and then: "I don't know but what it is my duty to stay here on earth, Samuel. When a husband gets to running after bull calves, who should watch out for him but his wife? If you would only get down on your knees!" The deacon made no move to rest on his marrowbones. "Or if you would promise to let bull calves alone for the rest of your life!" The deacon yawned and stretched. "Or if you would just say you was sorry!" The deacon didn't say it. "Well," said Mrs. Dolby as she wiped her tears away, "I know by your looks that you are sorry, and so I am going to forgive you. Samuel, would you like buckwheat cakes and maple 'lasses for breakfast?" And Mrs. Dolby was saved again!

Funerals in Peru.
According to social usage, women in Peru cannot attend funerals, and they do not appear at weddings unless they are very intimate friends. When a funeral procession passes through the streets the coffin is carried upon the shoulders of the pallbearers, who are followed by an empty hearse drawn by two, four or six horses, according to the means of the mourners and their desire for display. All the male members of the family and friends of the deceased follow on foot, with a line of empty carriages behind them. As long as they are in the presence of the dead it is considered a proper and necessary evidence of respect to walk. After the body has been committed to the grave those who attend the funeral are brought home in the carriages.

Never Again.
A man, who had been sick, told a friend that he was being treated by a certain physician. "Don't you know," said the friend, "that that doctor allows all his patients to die on his hands?" "Well, if he lets me die on his hands, I'll never patronize him again!" replied the other indignantly.—Indianapolis News.

An Anticlimax.
Sir Henry Irving was frequently a victim to the interjections of gallery gods. When playing "Macbeth" one night he had reached that dramatic moment in the banquet scene when in dreadful fear he bids the ghost of Banquo to vanish:
Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mockery, hence!
he exclaimed and, shuddering convulsively, dropped to his knees, covering his face with his robe. As the ghost vanished a shrill voice in the gallery broke the momentary silence. "It's all right now, 'Enery; he's gone!"—London Mail.

Lawn Fertilizer.
A splendid fertilizer for lawns, recommended by the Department of Agriculture is composed of the following:
Sodium Nitrate 4 parts
Powd. Blood Albumen 8 parts
Mix with 40 gallons of water or mix dry and sprinkle over 400 square feet of lawn.
While these salts are the principal ingredients that enrich the soil that manure is composed of, yet the fact is the cost is less than one-third as perfectly sanitary. Without dog wastes and grub worms, is also a good reason why it should be used in preference to manure.
