EVOLUTION OF GOOD ROADS

One of Greatest Factors in Campaign Is Voluntary Work Being Done, Especially in West.

hausting necessity of cutting its way through the primeval wilderness from Fort Cumberland to Turtle creek and the difficulty of bringing up an adequate support than from attacks upon it by the French forces and their indian allies. And when after Braddock's tragic death, in the course of his disastrous retreat, the command devolved upon George Washington, that young Virginian officer was forced by the slow progress made over the rough, newly cut roads to pitch camp at Fort Necessity, in southwestern Pennsylvania, the scene of his first and only surrender.

It was undoubtedly this bitter experience that gave Washington an insight into the need of the new country for improved roads, a subject which he discussed with vigor soon afterward in correspondence with General Forbes, who succeeded in taking Fort Duquesne only after cutting a shorter way from Carlisle through Bedford and across the Alleghany mountains.

One of the greatest factors in the itching sensation. I would pull my national campaign for better roads is hat off and scratch my head any place the voluntary work being done, especially in the far west, Robert Bruce For several years I was bothered writes in Leslie's. Of course the greatest single example of this is the prospective Lincoln highway from New York to San Francisco, which the au tomobile and allied industries have undertaken to build and toward which over five million dollars have already been subscribed. In the territory west of the Mississippi river, which has no such sources of revenue to draw upon as the Eastern states, this voluntary effort shows itself in an increasing number of "good roads" days, when thousands of able-bodied men. frequently headed by the governors of states, turn out and contribute the labor that is just as neecssary as cash. Sometimes it accomplishes more because voluntary work is uniformly enthusiastic and contagious.

A fine example of this voluntary effort is the building of a $50,000 sea level causeway along the Pacific coast between Ventura and Santa Barbara, Cal., shortening the Los Angeles-San Francisco route about eight miles and saving many steep, dangerous turns over the mountains through the Casttas passes. The funds for this work were raised principally through the Automobile club of southern California and the causeway was constructed for use by motorists pending the completion of a permanent sea level route by the state.

ROADS ARE MADE TOO WIDE?

Western Roadways Are From Fifty to Sixty Feet in Width-Much of Space Grown to Weeds.

It is argued that as a general thing and particularly in the West, the roads of the United States are too wide. The West and Germany are compared in this respect. It is pointed out that while in Germany, where the traffic is enormous, the highways are but 20 and 21 feet, in the West, where the traffic is comparatively light, and land worth $100 an acre. the roadways are from fifty to sixty feet in width, three-fourths of which grows up in weeds and grass.

It can hardly be said, however, that the roads are too wide in the eastern states. Mountain travelers, especially, will smile at the idea of wide roads in reading of the subject, having many a time and oft met face to face other travelers far from the "wide place," with the result that their vehicies had to be taken apart and carride by piecemeal or stood up at a dizzy angle against the cliff while the other hugged the perilous edge of a fathomless ravine.
