 The harvest moon is the full moon that makes its appearance at the time of the harvest or about the autumnal equinox. It rises at the same time for several days.

An Absolute Vacuum.
 What would seem to be an absolute vacuum may be produced in an extremely simple manner. There is employed a test tube (a tube of glass closed at one end), which in this particular case must be composed of a kind of glass that melts only at a very high temperature. Into the tube is poured molten glass of another kind which melts at a comparatively low temperature. When the latter has cooled, thus forming a solid mass completely filling the tube, a suction pump is attached to the open end of the tube, and heat is then applied until the softer glass in side is again melted. The next step is to withdraw the molten glass by means of the pump, enough being left to close the end of the tube completely, when it is allowed to cool once more. As no air can enter the space left vacant by the withdrawal of the molten mass, a perfect vacuum, it is believed, is produced there.—St. Louis Republic.

Tournament Closes With Bean Supper

The billiard tournament which had been in progress at the Elks' home between teams captained by Loren Sturges and Joe Larson, with twenty-five men in each team, closed Wednesday and the Sturges team was triumphant by a majority score of seven points. According to the agreement the defeated team was to pay for a bean supper and this was served at 6:45 at the home. Steward Smith was the caterer, and the meal he set for the boys was considerably more than a bean supper; it was somewhat of a feast and everybody "fell to" ravenously. The table was nicely decorated with flowers and the spread as a whole was beyond criticism. Following these upper impromptu toasts were proposed by J. T. Keefe as toastmaster, and responded to by the captain of the victorious and the vanquished teams and by others. In his introductory remarks Mr. Keefe said some very nice things about Steward Smith, and the compliments were well deserved, for the boys all agree that "Brimmy" is the one man among ten thousand.

The Empress is very attractively and comfortably furnished and with good programs will no doubt rank with the other play houses of the city.

Tomatoes are Cheap in California.

W. J. Crusen writes from California that his foot does not improve and is very painful, and that it has been ten weeks since he set it on the ground. His brother, who is living with him, has also been sick. He says he has one hundred bushels of tomatoes for sale but is only offered thirty cents a bushel for them, and even at that price he is unable to market them. He sends a picture of his home, which is a very pretty place.
