A North Platte man who returned from the state fair last night says the Lincoln county exhibit, while not the largest and best, makes a very creditable showing compared with the exhibits of other counties.

Two and one-half inches of rain fell at Grand Island Wednesday evening within half an hour. A heavy wind accompanied the rain, unroofing the grand stand at the fair grounds and doing other minor damage.

Widow Tyler, although she had been that for years and years. She was always referred to as Aunt Sarah. She was called queer and odd and a little off in her head, and nothing particular happened to her till a brother died and left her $1,000 in cash. Even before the money came into her bands everywould do with it. The lawyer who arranged matters started in to tell her of good investment in real estate, but "You tend to your business and I

Several weeks after receiving her noney the woman walked into the local bank one day and said she'd like to see outside of the brick vault with its iron door. According to the president, the best ten burglars in the country couldn't get into that vault if left

"It looks risky," she replied, "and I don't want to run no chances with my thousand dollars."

The matter was gone over again and again, and, though still uncouvinced, walk down to the bank to inquire if anything had happened during the night, and after this had become monotonous the president finally said; "Look here, Aunt Sarah, you know

I've got money outside of this bank don't like to have you worrying about your money, and I promise to give you five times the amount if the place is robbed.

"I've allus heard of you as an honest man." replied Aunt Sarah, "but if you | E. P. Frost, in the Atlantic Monthly. put that in writin' I shan't worry so much.

It was put in writing and duly witnessed, and for a few weeks the woman felt easier in her mind. One day a stranger came to town with a patent during these three bours ninety-eight churn. Aunt Sarah happened to be in the house of a neighbor when he called, and half an hour later she went down to the bank to say to the president:

"You just keep your eyes open. pever seen a bank burglar in all my life, but if that feller with the churn ain't one then I don't know black from white!"

She had been told that bank burglars generally began operations about midnight. At midnight that night she left her house and took a walk down to the both the legislatures and the courts by bank. She fully expected to find the moving through the halls of the fed- doors standing wide open and a wageral interstate commerce commission on backed up to the curb and was and for the present reaches only in- rather disappointed when she made no terstate fares. I'll come again That was what she did, and although disappointed again she was there on the third night at the same hour. This time she met with better luck. The rear of the bank was on an alley, and as Aunt Sarah quietly appeared she discovered a man crouched under one of the windows. The iron bars which had protected it had been filed and wrenched off, and a barrel had been rolled up to give somebody a lift into the opening. All of a sudden, without planning it at all, the woman sprang forward with a scream, or a succession of them. The man in the alley uttered a shout of alarm and fled at the top of his speed, and as he went clattering away a man who had been working inside the bank appeared at the window and jumped for the barrel beneath. He landed on it, but it went over and gave him a fling, and when he came down on the cobblestones of the alley that the Bucharest correspondent of his hip was broken and he lay helpless. Aunt Sarah's screams brought a sleepy watchman, and he soon had half the town out of their beds. When the bank president reached the scene after a run of five blocks the first person to salute him was Aunt Sarah, and she called out: "Didn't I tell you so! I knowed this bank would be robbed some day. I've got your written agreement, and now you'll hand me out them $5,000!" The bank president tried to crawl out of his agreement by claiming that the bank hadn't actually been robbed. but Aunt Sarah had a lawyer, brought him to time, and he puid her $5,000. A public purse of $1,000 was made up for her, and when she had the snug little fortune in her possession she de-Russians are reported as having termined to be her own banker in fupushed their advance sixty miles ture. The oomiak may be described as the "family boat" of the Eskimo. It is used by the men in whale and walrus bunting and by the whole family during their annual summer trips, which they make to gather the winter store of fish and berries. Then it presents a spectacle not soon forgotten. Crowded to the gunwales with a mixed assortment of men, women, children and dogs, together with piles of provisions and hides and all the impediments of camping, it moves slowly along. A sail of white and colored drilling, sewn in alternate strips, or even of patched skins, assists the laboring vessel through the water. Some of the occupants paddle when they feel like it. others scan the shore or watch the water rippling from the stern. If progress is too slow even for the Eskimo the dogs are put ashore, a stout line of wairus hide is attached to the bow, and they tow the boat along. Such parties are away all summer, or, rather, during the three months' interval which is not winter-a brief, beautiful season of unending delight .- Wide World Magazine.

Shift Your Gears!

If I were going to attempt a sermon and who does not feel himself capable of at least a couple's, my first test should be upon the theme, "Shifting Gears." I should begin with a pertinent Illustration. It would be the pleture of a motorcar and a long hill. You size up the hill from the bottom and thought. The engines begin to pound. But you have vowed to make the top over, with whatever reluctance, all would be well. Instead, you let the epgine fret and throb, perhaps stall itself application (which every one has seen coming all along). "Now, good friends. isn't this just what we are trying to do? Are we not playing the foolish chauffeur and wearing out our engines needlessly, when we attempt to take all life's roads upon the high speeds? Shift your gears before it is too late."-

Thirsty Berlin.

A census taken in Berlin at the dullest time of the evening, between balf past 5 and half past 8, showed that drinking places were visited by 23,436 persons. It must not be supposed that there are only ninety-eight drinking places in Berlin. On the contrary, a single street, the Blumenstrasse, which contains only eighty-four houses, has forty saloons and an inn, and there is actually a street in East Berlin, the Madaistrasse, which, with only fifteen houses, has seventeen saloons and three botels. There is very little drunkenness to be seen in the streets of Berlin, and one must stay up late to see that, but that is not because the thing is not abundant, but because the police will not tolerate any kind of disorder in public .- London Tatler.

A. J. SALISBURY,

War Summary.

The fall of Maubeauge, a strong French fortress on the Belgian frontier, is announced at the German army headquarters. Forty thousand prisoners and 400 guns, were taken, it is said.

No further official light had been thrown on what is probably the greatest battle of the war, being fought east of Paris from Montmiraille to Verdun and from Verdun to Nancy. Three million men are said to be engaged. A news dispatch from Paris indicates a bellef there that the German offensive move against the city has been definitely checked.

It is indicated that Roumania will soon throw its 200,000 troops into the conflict. A dispatch from Berlin says the Cologne Gazette reports a strong sentiment in favor of Russia throughout Roumania.

An English correspondent describes Austria as bankrupt and its people in panic. Bosnia, he says, is in open revolt. The situation is due to the failure of the Austrian arms against Russia.

Russia is reported as assuming the offensive in east Prussia and news from Berlin says that all eyes in the German capitol are turned eastward, where the importance of administering a check to the invading Russians appears quite as great as the vigorous pursuit of the French army. The southwest of Koenigsberg.

British officers arriving in Paris report that the battle east of the city still rages furiously.

Bishop Butler's Generosity.

The saintly Bishop Butler, whose "Analogy" is still used as a text book for clerical examinations, kept open house at Durham, where he dispensed hospitality with a lavish hand. On one occasion a man called at the palace soliciting a subscription for some charitable object. "How much money is there in the house?" asked Butler of his secretary. The secretary after investigation replied that there was £500. "Give ity to him, then," replied the philosopher bishop, "for it is a shame that a bishop should have so much."-London Globe.

Gentleman.

Gentleman is from the French "gentilhomme" and means one who belongs to the gens, or stock. In old Roman law gens-men, or gentlemen, were those only who had a family name, were born of free parents, had no slave in their ancestral line and had never been degraded to a lower rank.

Ancient Armor.

In 1518 a battle was fought near Milan, in Italy, and so perfect was the armor of both armies that, although the conflict raged from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m., no one on either side was either killed or wounded, though one man broke his collar bone by falling off his horse.
