BIG CROWD AT THE RALLY OF THE BOOSTERS

The boosters' rally at the tabernacle building last evening was attended by five or six hundred, quite a number of whom were ladies and while a number of business men who should have been there were not nevertheless the meeting was a representative gathering of those who favor boosting North Platte. The cornet band kindly donated its services, and rendered several selections on the streets and several in the building. As a program opener the Yeoman drill team in their natty uniforms gave the manual of arms, the stage being too small to permit of drill movements.

The speaker for the occasion was John L. Kennedy, of Omaha, former congressman from the Omaha district, an old-time resident of that city, and one who has given freely of his time and money for the advancement of the Nebraska metropolis. Secretary Temple, of the Chamber of Commerce, had written the Omaha Commercial Club, asking if they could send us a speaker for this occasion, and Mr. Kennedy was sent, his expenses being borne by the Omaha organization. Mr. Kennedy was introduced by President Seeberger, of the Chamber of Commerce, and gave the most practical talk along the line of civic improvement and town boosting that the people of North Platte have ever heard.

During the day Mr. Kennedy had been driven over the city and through the country surrounding the town and during this drive he, with keen discernment, noticed some of our lame points as well as good features. He was therefore in position to talk upon local conditions, and among the phases considered was the exclusion of dumping grounds along the highways and the beautifying of the city, the need of paved streets, the necessity of better drainage, the need of a hotel, which he understood was soon to be erected, the proper advertising of the city in order to bring additional people here, and to attract the establishing of industries suitable to the country. To secure these ends there must be an organization such as the Chamber of Commerce, and that organization must be backed by the people, not only by their moral support but financially as well. North Platte had a splendid future, but the town would always be just as the citizens made it. All the people should have faith in the town, it should not be "my" town, but "our" town.

As a matter of interest to the whole state, Mr. Kennedy favored the development of the water power of the Platte and Loup rivers, and the making of the Missouri river a navigable stream. Mr. Kennedy's talk was a practical one, and unquestionably he scattered seeds that will germinate and grow, creating a greater "booster" spirit.

The president then introduced Miss Annie Kramph, who spoke on local conditions in her customary expressive way; the need of a publicity fund, and also touched on the subject which appeals to her so strongly—and should to all of us—a greater recognition of our boys and girls, who will be the men and women of tomorrow.

Secretary Temple followed with a talk on the membership campaign and the publicity fund, and following his remarks donations to the publicity fund were solicited. The amount subscribed at the meeting was $1,390.

Escher, pastor of the Lutheran church at Hershey. All Scandinavians who want to have a pleasant midsummer day with us, are most cordially invited. Tabernacle for County Fair

The officers of the county agricultural society have made arrangements whereby the tabernacle building will be torn down, the material moved to the Dillon place on north Locust street, and the building re-erected as a hall for the exhibits.

This is the best solution of a problem that has confronted the society—that of securing a place for holding the fair—and we consider the action a most excellent one.
