N. Bell closed his plea for conviction at the noon recess. His address contained the startling charge that not only had Munday and his fellow conspirators wrecked the La Salle Trust and its subsidiary banks, but also that $928,000 of the alleged loot had been traced directly into Munday's pockets and not a word of explanation had been offered as to its whereabouts. Following the prosecutor's final argument, Judge Samuel C. Stough read his instructions to the jury.

The instructions were in some respects unfavorable to the indicted banker, while in others the prosecution was hit hard. It required nearly two hours to read those instructions, which covered every count in the indictment.

Doctor Haiselden says he could have saved the baby by an operation to complete its digestive system. But the partial paralysis, the current malformations, he declared, were so great a bar to happiness or attainment that he did not feel justified in saving the baby from the death which nature ordained. Chicago, Nov. 22 .- A jury of Chicago physicians decided on Friday that society has the right to refuse life to a baby born hopelessly defective. Dr. Harry J. Haiselden was exonerated from blame for permitting the death of Baby Bollinger after deciding that the child, if allowed to live, would be doomed to a life of misery and uselessness.
