That Advance in Rates

The Omaha Bee says: General Passenger Agent Basinger of the Union Pacific asserts that the increased passenger rates east from points in western Nebraska west of where the railroad runs out of this state, into Colorado a few miles and back into Nebraska, were not put in until they were ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Said Mr. Basinger relative to the matter: "A ticket sold at a point in Nebraska carrying the purchaser across the five or six mile strip west of Julesburg, Colo., and back into Nebraska is interstate business just as much as it would be if the ticket was sold from some station in Colorado, Wyoming or any other state into Nebraska or from Nebraska into some other state. This being true there was nothing left for us to do but apply the increase to every ticket sold across the strip of a few miles in Colorado."

Presenters Sweaters.

The sweaters for the members of the high school football team, which were purchased by the business men, were formally presented to the squad at the high school building Friday afternoon. Harry Fleishman, who secured the subscriptions, made the presentation speech.

Affiliations to Vote

A feature of the primary law which the general public is more or less unfamiliar with, makes it necessary for the voter to name his party affiliation. This is necessary because the first election is now known as the closed primary. A voter must select a political party, because party nominees are kept on separate ballots, and but one ballot is delivered to a voter. The first primary in this state used the blanket ballot, containing all candidates and all parties. That form has been done away with, and it is now necessary to announce a party affiliation in order to vote at a primary election. Those registering as independents or non-partisan cannot take part in the selection of candidates.—Kearney Democrat.

The President Should Unbend.

The crux of the Lusitania situation has finally been reached in the refusal of the German government to admit that the sinking of the ship was an illegal act, and if we understand the matter correctly this has been one of the points on which President Wilson has been insistent and on which he is still insisting. If this is where the matter stands, nothing is to be gained by insisting that Germany humiliate herself with such a confession, after every form of reparation demanded has already been agreed to. Our much needed "national honor" is not at stake to an extent that requires more than this. It is up to President Wilson to unbend in the interest of peace.—Kearney Hub.

Hay and Grain Rushed West.

Through freight rules are governing the shipment of grain and feed cars to the western states, particularly to Wyoming. All cars bearing hay or grain, to be used as feed, are almost given right of way over the trans-continental lines, according to local reports. The reason is that the heavy snows of recent weeks has resulted in the farmers of the Wyoming ranges being put up "against it." They are in dire need of hay and grain and it is coming through by the carload. The situation, according to stock papers, is a critical one and demands immediate shipments.

Mrs. A. S. Senter Dies.

A San Francisco paper received at this office contains the death notice of Mrs. Emma J. Senter, who for a number of years was a resident of North Platte, leaving this city about 1884. Mr. and Mrs. Senter built and occupied the house now owned by C. S. Clinton. For several years Mr. Senter was associated with T. J. Foley in the general merchandising and freighting business.

Optometry is rapidly destroying the prejudice that exists against glass wearing and is doing so by affording relief that exceeds the prejudice against their use. HARY DIXON, Registered Optometrist.

Miles Lichty, of Denver, is spending a few days here with his cousin, Homer Musselman, while enroute home from a business visit in the eastern part of the state. Mr. Lichty is quite well known here, having attended several of the local Knights of Columbus banquets.

C. J. ROTH BLOWS HEAD OFF WITH SHOT GUN.

C. J. Roth, committed suicide at the home of his father-in-law, A. H. Goodwin, in the north part of Hayes county Tuesday afternoon of last week. Roth and family started for the Goodwin home before dinner, Roth taking his shot gun along, saying he would try to get a rabbit. Just before arriving at the Godwin home he got out of the rig, telling his wife to drive on as he was going through the tree claim to see if he could scare up some game. Arriving at the barn a short time later he sent his little girl, who ran out to meet him, back to the house. Later a shot was heard and when Mr. Roth went to the house he said the gun went off accidentally and nearly got him showing the place where the shot went through his hat. About two o'clock another shot was heard but nothing was thought of it until an hour or so later when the body was found in the hay mow with the entire top of the head shot off. The act is attributed to temporary insanity, deceased having been worried over sickness and financial conditions. He leaves a wife and four small children, a father, two brothers and two sisters.

Never Eat What You Dislike.

I am constrained to protest against the advice given mothers to oblige their children to eat food which they dislike. Most grown people have their likes and dislikes, and if it were punishment to them to eat a despised article how much more so it is to a child to whom small troubles loom as tragedies! The child's distaste should not be discussed, simply ignored until he has forgotten how much he hated a certain article. There are so many good and nourishing things that if one is at all disliked how much better to substitute something else, thereby avoiding issues and friction, which every one knows are harmful to a child's nerves and health and disposition as well. And, as for letting a child go without his needed nourishment till next meal if he refuses one article, the injustice of it is too apparent to need comment.—Woman's Home Companion.

Big Guns Not New.

Modern howitzers and siege guns are giants of destructiveness, yet, making allowance for time and experience, we must still admire the good old burghers of Ghent, who 500 years and more ago turned out an iron "bombard" that weighed thirteen tons. This prototype of the up to date siege gun had a bore twenty-five inches in diameter. Out of it was projected a granite ball that weighed 700 pounds.

Origin of the Gypsies.

When the gypsies first appeared in England in the fifteenth century the name gypsy was given to them by the English people, who believed them to have come from Egypt. The French, by a similar mistake, called them Bohemians. But a careful study of this race, and especially of their language, shows that they came originally from India. The gypsy language is derived from the Sanskrit, as are the other Aryan languages of India. A similar error was made by the English when they called a distinctively American bird a turkey, under the impression that it was an importation from the Ottoman empire, and by the French when they called the same bird coq d'Inde, believing that it came from India.—Christian Herald.

Painter and Pawnbroker.

Mr. Frank Brangwyn, A. R. A., knows his Paris as well as most, and also a good many more out of the way parts of the world besides—Russia, Spain, Algiers, Turkey and the rest— which he has visited in the pursuit of his art, more especially during his earlier days, when he was less affluent than today, in which latter connection he once had an amusing experience. During a financial crisis he sought to effect a loan of $50 on the security of one of his own pictures. The pawnbroker offered $2.50, to the artist's indignation. "Why, the frame alone is worth more than that," he protested, to be met with the crushing reply, "I know it is, and it is on the frame that I am lending the money."—Westminster Gazette.

A Japanese Breakfast.

The usual Japanese breakfast consists of rice, miso, soup, pickles and occasionally fish. Tea is always served with meals and is drunk clear, without sugar or cream. Miso soup consists of strips of radishes, seaweed, eggplant or other vegetables cooked with bean curd and water. The cooking is not continued for a long period, and so few vegetables are used that the soup partakes only slightly of the flavor of the ingredients.

Somebody Had to Sleep.

The doctor entered the patient's room in the morning and, according to habit, read the chart the first thing. He was a little surprised to read: "2 a. m.—Patient very restless; nurse sleeping quietly."—Collier's Weekly.

Building a Small House.

When the prospective owner of a small house determines at last to build the home to which he has been aspiring for, perhaps, many years, he faces the consideration with the realization of a complex problem—the necessity of harmonizing the ideal that has formed in his years of anticipation with the stern realities of the actual building. Concisely stated, his problem is this: To combine the five desiderables—space, charm, distinction, utility and comfort—with the sixth, economy, within the apparently limited allowance of the small house. Sometimes he succeeds in this. Generally he yields to the difficulties presented and sacrifices one or more of the desirable qualities, thankful to get a finished house after all the discussion attendant with building progress. When, however, a home builder succeeds in the combining of all these qualities in the construction of his house the achievement is worthy of record.—Raymond Comstock in Country-side Magazine.

Limited Perpetual Motion.

Ambrose Fletcher solved the great problem of perpetual motion the other day, after laboring upon it for many years. It is in the shape of a ball which swings back and forth regularly and tirelessly, being propelled by a sort of clockwork mechanism. There is only one drawback to this solution of the old problem. He has to wind the machinery every eight days. There is always something wrong, isn't there? As soon as Ambrose gets it so it will run without winding he will have the problem definitely solved.—Brooklyn Eagle.
