WHO'S WHO.

Beginning with this issue The Tribune will introduce to its readers the candidates for nomination for offices who have announced themselves through these columns.

A. J. Salisbury.

There is probably no man in Lincoln county who can call by name more residents of the county than Art Salisbury, who seeks a re-nomination for sheriff by the republican party, and under these conditions it seems almost unnecessary for The Tribune to introduce him to its readers. By reason of the duties entailed upon him during his tenure of office Mr. Salisbury has come in contact in one way or another with practically every man of voting age in the county, and endowed with "mixing" qualities possessed by few he has made a friend of nearly every one he has met.

Mr. Salisbury came to Lincoln county nearly thirty years ago, located with the family on a homestead in Plant precinct, and after remaining there a number of years came to North Platte and engaged in the livery business. He continued in this until elected sheriff nearly five years ago.

The Tribune can say without fear of successful contradiction that no man who has filled the position of sheriff in Lincoln county has made a more efficient, a more honest officer than has Mr. Salisbury. Never once has he shirked his duties, never has he become involved in "cloudy" transactions, and his success in gathering in law-breakers has been almost phenomenal. "Let no guilty man escape," has been his motto and certainly he has lived up to it in detail. If you question this, write the warden of the penitentiary and ascertain the number of men Salisbury has taken there since he has been sheriff.

By reason of his wide acquaintance and popularity, Arthur J. will make a strong run.

J. W. Rowland.

In the race for the democratic nomination for county commissioner from the North Platte district is J. W. Rowland, better known as Will or "Buck" Rowland, who enjoys the distinction of being in point of residence one of the oldest inhabitants in North Platte, or in the county for that matter. He is a Lincoln county product, has spent all his years here, and has a wide acquaintance. After completing the school course in North Platte he followed the trade of a printer, and after serving faithfully and well at this for a number of years, accepted a position in the U. P. shops which he continued to hold until a year or so ago.

In the county, he has naturally taken an interest in county affairs, and being of an inquiring turn of mind he knows considerably more of the "ins" and "outs" of business pertaining to county administration than does the average citizen. Mr. Rowland says he wants the office because he needs the money, which is an honest admission that no one will object to if he gives efficient service in return therefor, and this he claims to have the ability and desire to do.

The nomination for this office will be made by the electors of the city and Hinman precinct, and as "Bully" is well known, his friends are pretty certain to give him an enthusiastic boost.

John W. Fowler.

Lincoln county has many level-headed, progressive farmers, men who have demonstrated by their own success that they are business men. Among these is John W. Fowler, whose farm-ranch is in Sellers precinct, and who seeks the republican nomination for county commissioner from the Third district. Mr. Fowler has resided in Seller's precinct for a dozen or more years, and has proven a most progressive and successful farmer and stock grower. He is a strong advocate of county development as is evidenced by the fact that he was one of the promoters of the telephone line that runs through that section of the county; he was one of the first to suggest and assisted in securing a rural postal route which daily delivers mail to the people along the route; by reason of his interest in agriculture and stock he has been a constant worker for and a director of the Lincoln county agricultural association; in fact the mere name of John W. Fowler suggests energy, push and business ability, likewise honesty and integrity. While there are several good men in the race for nomination, each of the others will know that Mr. Fowler is in the running.

P. R. Halligan.

For the republican nomination for county attorney there is but one candidate P. R. Halligan, son of J. J. Halligan, one of the leading attorneys of the west part of the state. Mr. Halligan came to North Platte with his parents when but a bit of a boy twenty years ago. He graduated from the high school and entering the state university took up the study of law, graduating from that department with high honors five years ago. Since his graduation he has been associated with Wilcox & Halligan, a firm that has an enviable reputation throughout the entire state, and whose clients are found in many counties in western Nebraska. His association with this strong firm has been beneficial to Mr. Halligan, as it would to any young attorney; and he has not been slow to profit by this prestige. For a year or two Mr. Halligan was county attorney of Arthur county through appointment made by the commissioners, and this, too, at a time when that county was being re-organized and many legal questions needed solution. However, he was equal to all demands and through his advice to the county officials no false steps were by them made.

Mr. Halligan is well qualified, and as his nomination is assured, the voters will no doubt give him enthusiastic support at the polls in November.
