Hillebrandt-Frye Wedding.

A pretty wedding took place yesterday morning at St. Patrick's church when Miss Carrie P. Frye was married to John P. Hillebrandt. The ceremony was performed at 6:45 by Rev. Patrick McDaid who also read the nuptial mass.

The bride wore a beautiful silk suit of midnight blue with trimmings of old rose and a picture hat to match. She carried a large bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley and was attended by her sister Miss Ethel Frye who wore a dark blue taffeta suit and large black hat. Her bouquet consisted of cecill brimo and miniature Geo Elge roses.

James McNeill attended the groom. After the ceremony thirty relatives were served with an elaborate breakfast at the home of the bride's sister Mrs. Clyde Cook on west Sixth street. The wedding gifts included many beautiful pieces of linen, silver and cut glass.

After a six weeks' honeymoon in California they will be at home to their friends at 521 west 9th street.

Mrs. Hillebrandt came to this city from Iowa when a small child and has resided here since. She was educated in the local schools held a responsible position in the telephone office and later was employed as saleslady in the Kaufman & Wernett store. Her amiable disposition and pleasing manner won for her a large circle of friends in her social and business life.

The groom has been a resident of this city for a number of years and is known as one of the most popular young fireman in the employ of the Union Pacific. His fellow workmen and many friends join in wishing he and his bride every happiness.

The literature department of the Twentieth Century Club met Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Joseph Roddy. Mrs. Frank Buchanan opened the meeting with a short talk on the aims and objects of the society and then turned the meeting over to Mrs. T. G. Thompson, the new chairman who appointed the following committees for the coming year; Secretary Mrs. L. W. the coming year; Program Mesdames Barron, Garlich and Skinner, court-ess Mrs. Loudon and Boatman. During the afternoon Mrs. Toole read an interesting book review of "The Heart of Rachael," a new novel by Katherine Norris.

HER WONDERFUL VOICE

Scene—Mrs. Somerville-Brown's reception rooms. Miss Anne Dantie has just finished a Richard Strauss composition on the piano to the applause—not boisterous—of the company. Mrs. Bollister, a stout lady in pink crepe and diamonds, is conversing with Herbert Plinsymons, a pale youth with a reputation for intellectuality. Somerville-Brown is resuming his discussion of the cotton campaign with Bollister. Miss Cora Bollister, a young woman with a swanlike neck and an effect of dreaminess, is gazing soulfully at Thomas Somerville-Brown, Jr., who seems to be having trouble with his collar. The soulfulness, however, is merely an expression of the emotions aroused in her by the music, and is not to be personally applied. Mrs. Somerville-Brown has left Patterson Huyp, who is the essence of politeness, to offer her congratulations and thanks to the pianist. Other guests are expressing one to the other their enjoyment of Miss Dantie's performance—with one or two confidential exceptions.

Mrs. Somerville-Brown—That was simply exquisite, my dear—delightful!

Miss Bollister—Don't you adore Strauss?

Thomas Somerville-Brown, Jr.—Well, to tell you the truth, I'm not daffy on him. It sounded like a Chinese orchestra to me.

Miss Bollister—Oh, you are thinking of Johann. This was Richard Strauss. You would love his songs.

Plinsymons—There is a subtle quality in the chords that defies successful analysis; not exactly emotional, because he is, above all things, intellectual. His music appeals to the intellect especially. I find it so myself. Have you ever studied the theory of tones?

Mrs. Bollister—No, I haven't, but Cora has. She's studied about everything there is in music. She took lessons of Hockslewitz, you know. He charged awfully, but I didn't care anything about the price. You haven't heard her sing, have you?

Bollister—You never heard Cora sing, did you? Excuse me; you were going to say—

Mrs. Somerville-Brown—Yes she has a voice. I'd be the last to deny it. So has the man who calls "Rags, old iron" in the alley. This parental pride is an awful thing, Mr. Huyp.

Huyp—But Miss Bollister's voice is rather—er—Really very much so, don't you know.

Mrs. Somerville-Brown—Well, they've been hinting to have me ask her to sing all evening, but I simply will not.

Thomas Somerville-Brown, Jr.—Mother, I think if you asked Miss Bollister she might sing for us. She sings you know.

Mrs. Somerville-Brown—Yes, I know and I think I might prevail on her to favor us. Now, you run back to her and— Did you say you were going to ask me to make her? No? Then that's all right. Take her to the conservatory.

Plinsymons—Mrs. Somerville-Brown, you are giving us a most delightful evening. The mental atmosphere is positively refreshing. Miss Bollister plays and sings, I hear. Couldn't you induce her—

Mrs. Somerville-Brown—I wish I could, but the dear child is so excessively timid that I know it would be positive torture to her and I really haven't the heart to ask her.

Somerville-Brown—See here, Mary, aren't you going to ask that little Bollister girl to sing? Bollister tells me she's a wonder, and I think the crowd needs chirking up.

Mrs. Somerville-Brown—Tom, I think you're all in a conspiracy to drive me frantic. I'm trying to find Herr Geineplatz to get him to play, and everybody is bothering me to ask Miss Bollister to sing.

Somerville-Brown—Then why don't you?

Mrs. Somerville-Brown—Because they never heard her, and I want the evening to be a success.

Herr Geineplatz—I haf joost hear dat you vere looking vor me. Mees Bollister, who was a bupl oht Hochslewitz.

Mrs. Somerville-Brown—Wants to sing. Well, I suppose— Where is she?

Herr Geineplatz—I vill be jarmed to blay de aggompaniment.

Mrs. Somerville-Brown—So good of you! Oh, here she is now! You bad girl, where have you been hiding yourself? We want you to sing to us. Now, there's no use saying you can't sing, or that you are out of practice or that you would be ashamed to before so many accomplished musicians. We know all about that.

Huyp—What a wonderful expression—and what a voice!

Bollister—It ain't bad, judges tell me. I'm not musical myself, but I know the money I've spent on her musical education ought to bring some returns.

Mrs. Somerville-Brown—Well, it isn't often one hears anything like that! I should think you would be proud of her, Mrs. Bollister.

Mrs. Bollister—I am.
