Don't Judge This Company by One Act of An Unthinking Employee

Every employee of this company has been taught that his or her duty is to render not only efficient service but to be courteous and absolutely fair in every action.

We have been foremost to establish and propose to continue our efforts to maintain good wages and good working conditions.

In return we insist upon efficient service from our employees and courtesy and thoughtfulness in their dealings with our patrons.

We feel sure that all of our employees are imbued with the spirit of service and conscientiously want to serve you, but all of us are human and all of us occasionally do thoughtless things.

When you believe we have made a mistake, when you think we have erred in any way in dealing with you, please call it to our attention. We want you to feel free to do so. We want to correct any error that has been made—any wrong that has been done—and we want you to tell us about it so we may.

Do not judge us by one act of an unthinking employee. Always we are trying to serve you faithfully and well.

A Long Lived Eagle.

It has been a tradition from time immemorial that the eagle renews its strength when very old. It mounts aloft until it comes very near the sun, when, scorched by the heat, it throws itself into the sea, whence it emerges full of renewed vigor.

Such have supposed that the passage in Psalms ciii, 5, "Thy youth is renewed like the eagle's," alludes to this old fable. But the more probable fact is that it refers to the strength and vigor which characterize the eagle even in old age.

A couple of years ago a large specimen of eagle was shot on the fjord by the city of Nakskov, Denmark. Around its neck was fastened a small chain to which was attached a sealed bottle. On opening the bottle a note was found written in Danish, which translated reads as follows: "Caught and again made free by N. and C. Anderson in the year 1792."

Pain and Appendicitis.

That pain at what doctors call "McBurney's point" is not, as generally believed, proof of appendicitis was demonstrated before a Texan medical society recently by Dr. P. I. Nixon of San Antonio in an address published in the Medical Record.

Dr. Nixon told the history of several cases in which operation proved the diagnosis of appendicitis to have been erroneous and of one in which an exploratory operation proved appendicitis to be the trouble when there was no pain over McBurney's point. This is situated low down on the right side of the abdomen.

It takes a combination of several different symptoms together to warrant a certain diagnosis of appendicitis.

No Pedestal For Him.

"Whatever you do," said Senator Sorghum to his faithful campaign assistant, "don't let my friends overdo it in representing me as a great and lofty figure. Don't let them put me on a pedestal."

"What's the matter with a pedestal?" "I have been studying the statutory in the park. Putting a man on a pedestal generally means that he'll have to stay out in the cold by himself."—Washington Star.

Kissing in Iceland.

Among old time laws against kissing those of Iceland appear to have been the most severe. Banishment was the penalty laid down for kissing another man's wife, either with or without her consent. The same punishment was enforced for kissing an unmarried woman against her will. If it could be proved that she had consented to be kissed the offender was still liable to a fine of a great quantity of cloth for each offense.

Right in His Line.

"Need any more talent for your moving picture dramas?" "We might be able to use you. Have you had any experience at acting without audiences?" "Acting without audiences is what brought me here."

Neglected.

Smitty (taking his watch from under his pillow)—Quarter to 8 and no one has come to wake me yet. I shall certainly be late for class if they don't come soon.—Lehigh Burr.
