BULLARD TELLS OF CAMP LIFE AT THE STATE CAPITAL

Camp Morehead, Thursday.
Editor Tribune: It may be of interest to some of your readers if I relate a few details of camp life down here. We arrived last Sunday morning and were immediately mustered into the Fifth Nebraska National Guard as Company E. We all passed the physical examination successfully and all of the recruits who have since applied for admission to our company have stood the test equally well.

Of course you knew that Rolfe had been elected captain, and I might add that we were especially fortunate in securing Mac Abbott, of Beatrice, for our first lieutenant and Aubrey Kenworthy, of Omaha, for our second lieutenant and Floyd Mason, of Beatrice, as our first sergeant. They are all exceptionally capable officers, and we will have a company that North can be justly proud of in a very short time.

We have been somewhat handicapped from lack of experience and organization, we being the only new company at the camp, all others having been organized for years; but we are rapidly rounding into shape.

The boys, generally, are very well satisfied, but very much disappointed with the prospects of being forced to stay here instead of going to the border; to use the expression, we are all "rearing" to go, but it looks like the dispute down there will be settled without much doing in our line. We were all inoculated last night with the anti-typhoid serum and only two of the boys were very much affected, but they are O K today. We will have to take two more "shots" in the arm before the treatment is complete. Then comes vaccination. Eugene W. Chester, one of the boys from home, has been appointed cook and he is sure a good "line" so there is no need to worry about our rations.

We have been drilling several hours a day and it has been very hot so we will soon be able to stand even Texas weather. Our company will be mustered into the federal service as soon as we number sixty-five enlisted men; we have fifty-five at present and by tomorrow evening will probably be to the limit. The regiment will not go until we are ready to join it.

There have been a few North Platte people out to see us and we don't want any of our friends to come to Lincoln and leave without coming out to visit us. Our regiment is encamped within the race track at the fair grounds and the people of Lincoln and vicinity are constantly taking in the sights.

All of the boys unite with me in sending personal regards to you and to all of our friends and neighbors.

Sincerely yours,
ARTHUR W. BULLARD,
Q. M. Sergeant, Co. E. 5th Reg. Camp Morehead, Lincoln, Neb.

Roosevelt on Hughes.

"Mr. Hughes has shown in his career the instinct of efficiency which will guarantee that, under him, the government will once more work with vigor and force. He possesses that habit of straightforward thinking which means that his words will be correlated with his deeds and translated into facts. His past career is the warrant of our belief that he will be the unfaltering opponent of that system of invisible government which finds expression in the domination of the party boss and the party machine. His past career is a guarantee that whatever he says before election will be made good by his acts after election. Morally, his public record shows him to be a man of unbending integrity; intellectually, it shows him to be a man of original and trained ability. We have the alternative of continuing in office an administration which has proved a lamentable failure, or of putting into office an administration which we have every reason to believe will function with efficiency for the interest and honor of all our people. I earnestly bespeak from my fellow Progressives their ungrudging support of Mr. Hughes."

A Picture Of Peace

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Needing a model for a painting of a female figure I intended to call "Peace." I hunted everywhere for one. I could find plenty of women with suitable figures, but figure expresses nothing that I wanted except symmetry. I painted my picture in my studio, using a model for the figure whom I have often employed, leaving a blank space for the face, intending if ever I found one suitable to my purpose I would introduce it. But time flew by and I feared the great European war, which rendered my subject timely, would come to an end before I could find a model.

One day while looking out of a rear window of my house I noticed sitting at a window opposite mine a girl whose lineaments were exactly what I wanted. She was sewing, and since the window in which she sat was at an angle with mine I got a three-quarters view of her face. This was the position of my figure of "Peace" in my picture. I noticed that the girl occupied the same position nearly every morning from about 10 o'clock till noon. It occurred to me to bring my canvas and my implements to my room and use the girl for a model. She would be unconscious that she was being used for the purpose, and this would be a great advantage. So I transferred my materials from my studio to my chamber, and, closing the blinds so that my model would not see me copying her, I set to work. Fortunately I seldom missed getting a sitting each morning. My picture was a great success. How much its being displayed when the European war was in progress had to do with the public's appreciation of it I don't know. Naturally the war created an interest in it. I spent much time in the gallery where it was hung, watching those who looked on it, and noticed that the expressions of all who viewed it were for the time being softened.

But one who listens to criticisms of his work will surely hear some fault-finding. During these cave-droppings I heard one adverse comment. Two ladies were viewing it when one said: "She's a spitefire."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the other. "What do you mean? She is the impersonation of amiability. How could you have got such an impression?"

"I don't know, but I've got it all the same."

They passed on, leaving me wondering how one person of the many hundreds who looked at the picture should have divined such a different interpretation of it from the rest. Surely the judgment of the many was of far more value than the one. Nevertheless the criticism troubled me. Might not others have got the same impression from my "Peace," but left it unexpressed? However, my picture did much to introduce me as an artist, and my conscience had often pricked me for sponging the services of a model. I meditated sending an anonymous note, inclosing a check, to the young woman. I finally concluded that so refined looking a person would need some preparation for the reception of such payment. I therefore wrote a note telling how I had conceived the painting of a picture of peace, how I had found a model in her and how I had produced a successful work, which I could not have produced without taking advantage of her presence at a window opposite mine. I deemed it proper that she should derive some benefit from my success and humbly asked permission to send her a check.

I had written this note in my room while my model of "Peace" had been sitting in her accustomed seat in her window and was taking up my hat to go out and around the block to leave it at her door, for I did not know her name, when I saw approaching from the rear of the room in which she sat the figure of another girl about her own age. Then I heard the one who had newly entered say:

"Maria, what did you mean last night by taking Johnny Doyle away from me?"

"What did you mean by taking Billy Dunker away from me?"

"I didn't!"

"You did!"

MUNICIPAL LIGHTING PLANTS MAKE BAD SHOWING

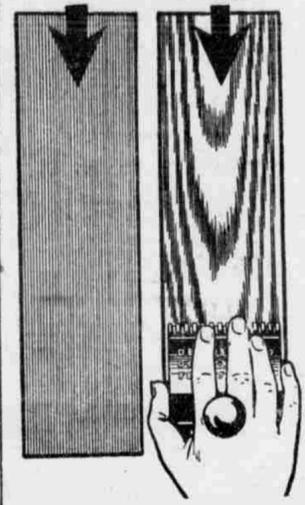

From the Nebraska City Press: Fremont and Wynmore municipally-owned lighting plants have made such a bad showing, after their books were examined by experts called in for the purpose, that the devotees of municipal ownership as a whole have been short of many of their arguments in favor of such public utilities. The Fremont plant has never been able to show a profit in spite of statements prepared from time to time by men whose object to make a good showing, if possible, is easily understood. As a matter of fact the Fremont plant is shown by experts to have lost about $50,000 instead of making the net profit of $28,000 claimed for it by city officials. At Wynmore, where the plant is similar, tax-payers are charged $12,000 annually for the pleasure of running a municipal plant.

Mrs. L. C. Riggs is expected home today from a visit in Chappel.
