

AN INTERESTING EXHIBIT FOR THE COUNTY FAIR.

A tent 30 to 40 feet containing an exhibit of the College of Agriculture, University of Nebraska, will be on display at the Lincoln County Fair, North Platte, Sept. 24 to 29th. The exhibit is not a mere collection of samples of students' work nor does it consist only of a series of pictures illustrating the college. It is devoted largely to a graphic illustration of the best farm practices for Nebraska and other agricultural information obtained from investigations of the Agricultural Experiment Station.

Among some of the things to be seen will be photographs an specimens of the diseases of corn, oats, potatoes and other crops as well as information as to how the diseases may be controlled; a model farmstead in miniature, an exhibit of the best rations for live stock including poultry; specimens of insect pests and data as to how they may be controlled; results of farm surveys and figures concerning the cost of crops; a display of sprayed and unsprayed fruit; specimens of pruning tools and spray machinery; illustrations of the proper methods of pruning; recipes, methods of canning, schemes of household furnishing and decoration; a display of textiles; an exhibit of canned products and trophies of the state boys' and girls' clubs. In short, every department at the University Farm will be represented, but the results of investigational work will be particularly in evidence.

The exhibit is to go to but eleven other county fairs this year in addition to the state fair, and this county was chosen after a careful planning of the schedule. The exhibit will arrive in a special car furnished gratis by the railroads and will be in charge of the employes of the College of Agriculture.
