RESIDENT OF BRULE DIES SUNDAY AT HOTEL McCABE.

A. R. Pease, a retired blacksmith of Brule, who came here Saturday to take medical treatment dropped dead at noon Sunday at the Hotel McCabe. Mr. Pease arrived here on the morning train and being in a very weakened condition was taken to his room, where he was assisted in disrobing by the clerk of the hotel. The physician was summoned and gave treatments at intervals during the day. Sunday morning his condition became more serious and although the employes of the hotel visited his room several times to render assistance to him, he dropped dead at noon while attempting to arise. It is thought he was endeavoring to reach the telephone. The remains were taken to the Howe & Maloney undertaking rooms and will be shipped to Scotia, Neb., for interment. The deceased was about sixty-five years of age and had been in poor health for some time. He leaves three daughters, Misses Ethel and Violet Pease of Omaha, Mrs. R. L. Butterfield of Brule, and a son Lewis Pease of the eastern part of this state all of whom arrived here Sunday morning.

Wheat One Seventy.

One dollar and seventy cents per bushel was offered for wheat on the local market yesterday. The Omaha price advanced six or eight cents. It is possible that Lincoln county farmers may yet have a chance to sell wheat for two dollars a bushel. It is said that flour is due for another advance. Bread for the family of the average laborer may become somewhat of a luxury.

TELLS OF ACTIVITY OF THE NEVILLE CAMPAIGN

Mr. Hutchinson, who has been making North Platte his headquarters for several months, writes as follows to the Kearney Hub:

"As North Platte has been placed upon the map of the United States as the home of Nebraska's next governor, it will not be out of place to have something to say about the campaign of its man who has brought this distinction to western Nebraska. As an assistant in the clerical work in Mr. Neville's campaign headquarters here for several weeks I have had a splendid opportunity to study the modus operandi of a real campaign, for Neville's campaign was a real one, and a little insight into its details will prove of interest to those who have never had the privilege of looking on one.

Mr. Ora E. Elder, of this city, had personal charge of the Neville campaign in all its ramifications. It has always been known that Mr. Elder was a skilled political manager. His ability along that line having been in the past frequently exemplified in local campaigns of lesser magnitude than this one. His system of handling Mr. Neville's interests has excited the admiration of both political friends and enemies, and new laurels are added to his crown as campaign manager.

As to Mr. Neville's part in the campaign. After he had settled down to make a personal canvass of the state, which he did on the third day of August, and which continued until the midnight before election, he covered every county in the state, speaking in from five to eight towns in each county, or a total of close to one thousand cities and towns in the state. During that three months he was at home but two or three times and then very briefly. He traveled fifteen thousand miles approximately, nearly all this distance in his automobile. Only once or twice were his travels handicapped or delayed by storms. Only once during his long campaign of speaking in public either indoors or out, did his voice show any signs of failing and that was when a slight hoarseness developed for a day or two.

The great charm and beauty of Mr. Neville's canvass was the fact that not once during it all did he indulge in one word uncomplimentary to his antagonist on the other ticket, and in his speeches he utterly ignored the assaults made upon him by various parties opposed to his candidacy.

On the night of November 6 Mr. Neville had completed his campaign by making on that day eight open air speeches in the city of Omaha and South Omaha and returned to North Platte after an absence of more than three weeks. He arrived here early in the morning. He went at once to his home to greet his wife and babies. Later he went to his polling place and voted, then to his office where the day was devoted to greeting numerous friends who called, and informally discussing the probabilities of the day. He was as composed as though he had not, only the night before, emerged from a strenuous speaking tour of over three months duration. Although he may have felt it his athletic physique gave no evidence of undue fatigue; his face betrayed no sign of weariness; his eyes were bright and restful; in a word he was in the "pink of condition," showing what a wonderful constitution a man may possess who has taken care of himself as Mr. Neville has.

The people of North Platte and Lincoln county have received the news of Mr. Neville's election with great rejoicing, and are unanimous in the belief that he will make as good a governor as the state ever had. Even his few political enemies here believe that.
