Mr. and Mrs. Charles Temple and the ladies' auxiliary to the B. of R. T. ask the public to save all old magazines and papers until March 1st when they will be called for. Proceeds from the sale of these will be used in helping to build a home for the aged members of this order.

Some of the Old Timers.

The proposed organization of an old settlers' association is developing the fact that in the city and county there are some real old timers. Here are a few of those who have given their names and dates of settlement:

Charles McDonald, 1860.
W. H. McDonald, 1861.
Cyrus Fox, Garfield, 1863.
John Burke, 1864.
John Hinman, 1865.
W. H. Boyer, 1866.
E. E. Ericsson, Cottonwood, 1866.
D. W. Baker, 1866.
Luke Healy, 1866.
P. J. Gilman, 1867.
C. A. Wyman, 1867.
T. C. Patterson 1868.
W. H. C. Woodhurst, 1868.
W. F. Stack, 1868.
James Bahlitt, 1868.
C. F. Tracy, 1869.
John Bratt, 1869.
J. K. Ottenstein, 1869.
Frank Boyer, 1869.

These are selected from the forty names that have been handed in; there are a number of others who located in the city or county prior to 1870.

Miss Charlene Grace Married.

Miss Charlene Grace daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Grace formerly of this city, was married at Cheyenne last Saturday morning to Raymond W. Baker, the ceremony occurring at St. Mary's cathedral with Rev. Fr. Hartman as the officiating priest. The bride wore a traveling frock of burgundy broadcloth fur trimmed, with picture hat and carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses. Mrs. Richard Grace was matron of honor and Milledge Grace was best man. Following the ceremony breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, and the same day the couple left for Tacoma, Wash., where the groom takes the management of a Woolworth store. For three years he had been manager of the Woolworth store in Cheyenne. Mrs. Baker will be remembered by many North Platte people.

Our First Woman Teacher.

Yesterday we were shown a Christmas card received last month by Mrs. P. J. Gilman from C. L. Patterson, of Denver, on which was inscribed "To my old school teacher." This recalls the fact that forty-eight years ago Mrs. Gilman taught school in the little old log building that stood on the corner of Dewey and Fifth, and Mrs. Gilman was North Platte's first lady teacher.

Among the pupils that term were Clint and Cochran Patterson, Charley and Arthur Wyman, Norman Stone, Mrs. Joseph Fillion and her three brothers, the Morin boys, and Will Woodhurst.

Brodbeck, secretary, treasurer and reporter.

Dr. Brock, Dentist, over Stone Drug Store.

Duncan Carries $15,000 Radium.

A Los Angeles paper has this to say of Dr. Rex Duncan, a former North Platte boy:

"Hold-up men of this city missed a golden—or rather a radio-active—opportunity last evening when they failed to assault Dr. Rex Duncan, when he was on his way to address a meeting of the Faculty Science Club at the University of Southern California. Dr. Duncan, who is a member of the faculty in the College of Pharmacy and an authority on radiotherapy, brought along in his pocket radium worth $15,000 with which to demonstrate its use in medicine before the faculty men. When his lecture was over he nonchalantly put the radium back into his pocket and walked home."

Ex-County Clerk Yost expects to leave shortly for Kansas City with a view of looking up a location for some class of business or else securing a position. He has mentally canvassed conditions in North Platte and fails to find what he considers a possible opening.

Dr. Morrill, Dentist.

Next Saturday's matinee will be held at the Crystal instead of the Keith as it has been for the past few weeks. So please take notice that the matinee will be on the picture "The Men She Married," at the Crystal Theatre, Saturday afternoon at 2:00.

A Supper At Sanger's

By SADIE OLCOTT

Jenny Wright was, between the ages of sixteen and twenty, the belle of the village.

When Jenny was nineteen there were even chances between Arthur Perry and Herbert Angell. Among the laggards Ed De Forest's show seemed the poorest.

Now, Jenny Wright's bunch was considered the liveliest that had ever been known at Hunterville. They were constantly playing pranks on one another, and never was there a case wherein the person victimized failed to take his or her medicine good naturedly. Then, too, there were driving, fishing and swimming parties in summer and skating and coasting parties in winter.

One day when they were together at their headquarters, which was Jenny Wright's home, one of the boys complained that there was, as he expressed it, "nothing doing," which meant that amusements were lacking. One of the girls proposed that they get up a mock elopement. The idea caught at once, and different plans of procedure were suggested. Of course Jenny must be the feminine part of the elopement. That went without saying. But who was to be the masculine part of it?

Naturally at this point there came a halt. None of the girls cared to nominate a fellow to elope with Jenny. No fellow would nominate himself and certainly wouldn't nominate any one else. Jenny, of course, was not in a position to choose. What made the matter of more import was that Arthur Perry and Herbert Angell were pressing each other in a mad chase for her favor, which was supposed eventually to mean her hand.

When it looked as if the matter would have to be dropped for want of a selection of an eloping groom Arthur Perry, who felt more confidence in his chances for being chosen to be eventually Jenny's real husband, suggested that Jenny herself make the choice, but that it be kept a secret between her and the fellow she chose till the elopement had taken place. She was to notify the party of her choice, and he was to run away with her exactly on the stroke of 9 of the town clock. At 10 the bridal party was to meet at Sanger's, a hotel and roadhouse at Hilton, five miles distant, where they would all congratulate the bridal couple and then sit down to a supper.

The suggestion was at once adopted by all the party except Jenny, who was finally won over. It was not considered certain that she would select the man she would choose for a husband, but it was supposed that she would.

Sanger was notified to have a supper ready at half past 10 for a party of twelve on the evening appointed for the elopement. The girls very nearly wore out Jenny, each one teasing her to give her the name of the prospective groom. Jenny proved to be adamant and kept her secret. Among the boys a pool was made as to who would be chosen, with Arthur Perry favorite, Herbert Angell next, and a fellow named Jerrikan received odds as a dark horse. There were a few other scattering bets on various fellows. Johnny Stevens would have nothing to do with the pool on the ground that it was a blind game. "No fellow," he said, "can ever form an intelligent opinion as to what a girl is going to do."

The elopement was held up for a week by the weather, which was stormy, and this tended to increase the interest in the prank to the boiling point. Even the girls got to betting candy and flowers and gloves. Jenny said she couldn't see why there was so much excitement about a matter that was all for fun, but her words had no effect to still the babel.

The night of the elopement having arrived, the wedding guests assembled at the house of one of the girls, while a motorcar stood at the door. Since it was desirable that the groom should not be known before reaching Sanger's, it had been arranged that the girls should go together, the boys separately and each one by himself. At half past 9 the girls boarded the car which was driven by Miss Cheesman, its owner, and set out for the rendezvous. On reaching Sanger's they found all the boys there, and while the girls were being handed out of the car by them up came the runaways. The masculine part of the couple was not Perry or Angell or Jerrikan, but a horse darker than the last named and one who had not been suspected of having any chance whatever. He was Edward De Forest.

He handed Jenny out of the car with the bearing of one who had not been selected to carry out a bit of fun, but with an air of proprietorship. When all had alighted and gone into the hotel drawing room the boys and girls advanced to congratulate the couple. De Forest raised a band, and there was a pause.

"Girls and fellows," he said, "I have a surprise for you. There has been no elopement. Jenny and I have been engaged for some time, and with her and my parents' consent we were married at her home at 9 o'clock this evening. We are ready to accept your congratulations as a real bride and groom."

The two favorites in the race wilted. The others with great gusto began the pump handle act. Perry and Angell finally falling into line. Then came the merriest supper that ever occurred at Sanger's.
