Great Feat Splendidly Carried Out The passage of the American army transports through the U-boat zone without the loss of a man is a really remarkable feat of war. Whether or not spies had communicated with Berlin is not so overwhelmingly important in connection with the main fact. spies do have some means of communication with the kaiser's leaders, and that they may even have ways of side. But it would do our own intelli- orbitary cavity. gence little credit did we not also admit that the German leaders are alert and watchful at all times.

German Agents Stir Up Strife. With the arrest Wednesday of Joseph Graber, an organizer of the industrial workers of the world, charged with being a spy in the employ of thei German government, federal authorities declared their investigation had satisfied them that recent strikes and agitations grin on your face. 1:0::-Equipment Awaiting Men. Clothing and equipment for the first million men of the new armies will be delivered by September 1, the tentative date of the mobilization of the first increment of the national army. A statement issued by the war department says that adequate supplies for all the national guard and national army will be available by the time the troops are called out. The department already has equipped 300,000 men, national guards and regulars, and the troops in France have with them stores to last six months.

Shotguns In War.

That shotguns should be largely utilized in modern warfare is the contention of a number of military experts. It is pointed out that such guns would be particularly useful to sentries at night time, as an intruder might more easily be crippled and captured by a spreading charge of heavy shot than by a single bullet. Moreover, a person moving quickly might often be missed by a shot from a rifle, whereas a snapshot from a shotgun in semidarkness could hardly fall to find its object.

In the trenches shotguns could be used with success. A shotgun loaded with about forty-eight grains of powder and one and a half ounces of big shot, with about twenty-five pellets, would be of much more value than the rifle, as during a night attack, either for attack or defense in semidarkness, a single charge would hardly fall to inflict serious wounds on one or more of the enemy.-Exchange.

The Swiss Admiral.

"As much business as a Swiss admiral" is a term sometimes used satirically. But the little inland nation actually had an admiral once. He was an Englishman, too, a Colonel Williams, who joined the Swiss colors in 1799. This Colonel Williams got together a small fleet on Lake Zurich and was ordered to oppose the French army, which was preparing to attack the Austrians and Russians massed near by.

The French attacked their allied foes and routed them, Admiral Williams calmly watched the battle that was in progress on land. Then, enraged at his own inaction, he discharged his crews, attled his vessels and went back to

His First Golf Play. H. Chandler Egan's first golf was played on a three hole course in a pasture back of his father's house, at Highland Park, Ill. The former champion and his brother laid out the links, then invited their cousin, Walter, to teach them the game. The latter teeing up a ball on the first, hit it straight down to the broomstick which served as a flag pole. The ball bounced along the uneven green and disappeared in the hole. Turning to his astonished gallery, he remarked:

"There, you see, it is very simple That is the way you do it."

Chandler Egan tried, but didn't succeed, and although he won the amateur title twice, he claims he was never able to equal the wonderful drive his cousin made that day.-Golfers' Maga-

Very Unfeminine

By OSCAR COX

I went into Charnley's for lunch the other day, and while I was eating Fred Bemerton came in, and I aske! him to sit down at the table with me. He did so, and I congratulated him on his engagement, of which I had hear some time before. He didn't look like man who had just been made happy by a girl, but I reckoned be had passed out of the seventh heaven stage and was wondering how he was going to support a wife on a salary that he had been spending entirely on himself. "It's all off," he said snappishly,

"What's the trouble?" I asked. "See here, Jim; I've had all I want of girls. They have no sense of honor such as a man has. Fact is there's nothing manly-I mean noble-in 'em at all. Nothing a girl likes so much as to get a fellow by the ear and play him for a fool. That's what Mattie wanted with me."

"You haven't yet got to the cause of he breach.'

"Weil, Molly and I were out at a lance. I put my name on her card for every alternate dance, leaving her dance with some one else for every dance with me. That was about right, wasn't it? She objected. I told her I thought one in two was enough for the other fellows, and she said she thought that if she danced with me two or three times during the evening it would be enough for me. I told her go without any. And I scratched my name off her card entirely. Do you know, the girl filled her card without my name being on it and was the merriest girl in the room."

"Very unfeminine." "You mean very detestable."

"What did you do next?" "Why, I left before the dance was finished and left her to go home with some one of the fellows she had preferred to me.'

"Oh, you did?" "You bet I did!"

"You had taken her to the dance hadn't you?" "Yes.

"What did she do next?" "Nothing."

"And you?" "I wrote her a note saying that if very other fellow had as much right to dance with her as I we'd better call It off."

"And she?" "She hasn't deigned to send me a re

"Ironically?" "Yes. The girl acted like a girl. You acted like a ninny."

Now, he knew very well that he had old line Life Policies bore witness to the fact instead of getting up on his ear he collapsed. He didn't say a word for awhile, but he looked like a man who had committed a crime and had just realized that the J. E. SEBASTIAN, State Mgr. heavens were about to fall on him. His first words were:

"I've knocked the bottom out of the universe." "Oh, no, you haven't." "You don't think so?" eagerly and with a beam of hope. "No." "What shall I do?" "Take a back track as quick as you can." "How?" "Go to her and ask her pardon. Tell her that you've made an ass of yourself and will never do so any more." "I think I'd rather write it."

"Nonsense. Face the music like a man. Writing would only show half hearted repentance. Speech is better buying hogs. than ink any time and in such cases is infinitely better. What's written is capable of various interpretations. In speaking one has the advantage of looking his meaning. In writing there is no expression of any kind."

"But suppose she won't see me?" "Hang on till she does."

"And suppose she sees me, but turns me down?"

"Hang on all the tighter." He sat deliberating. Presently be looked up at me and said:

"Jim, I would rather attack a fortification single handed. Is there no other way out of it?" "There wouldn't be for me if I were In your place."

Another season of screwing up of courage, and he rose from his sent. took his hat and said: "Goodby, Jim. If I fail look for my body in the canal." "Goodby, Fred. I know just how you feel; I've been there myself." "Acted like a chump?"

"No; like an inebriated donkey." The same evening the following telephone dialogue took place between him
