Old Scout, thy race is run, Thy life work so well done, Through all thy fitful years Has swelled a nation's tears;

And we, who yet remain, In witness of thy fame, Must bow our heads in grief, And mourn our silent chief,

And ye, who from afar Follow the Western Star Of empire seeking fame, Pause when you see the name Inscribed on yonder tomb;

And this the fitting spot By nature's forge begot; Where rocks and hills abound, And whispering pines resound

Sweet rest, Old Scout, good bye On Lookout's mountain high, Where the rosy morning sun, E'er scarce his race begun,

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in North Platte

No woman should consider herself healthy and well if the kidneys are weak. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are disordered.

Mrs. L. B. Tarkington, 209 East Eighth Street, North Platte, says: "I use Doan's Kidney Pills whenever I have need of a kidney medicine. They always give me relief from backache and other kidney disorders, putting my kidneys in good condition."

The Head of The Family

By RUTH GRAHAM

It was a month after their marriage. Not a word had been spoken to interrupt that current of romance down which they had been sailing ever since they became conscious that they loved.

"My dear," he said pettishly, "I suppose I must go through another day with a safety pin for a suspender button?" "Another day, dear! What do you mean?"

"If I remember aright, this is the third time I have asked you to replace the button that came off a week ago." She made no reply, but went to her workbasket, got out what was needed and sewed on the button.

Romance had given place to reality. From that moment she began the duties of a wife. Her day was all for her husband. When she arose in the morning her first duty was to see that he had what pleased him for breakfast.

And he? He went down to business in the morning and worked hard all day—for her. When his competitors got ahead of him, when wrangling over disputed business transactions fretted him, when he failed to make money or when he met with success it was all for her.

One day she reproached him. "The day is not long enough," she said, "for me to do all I have to do for my master. I did not know when I married you that I was bringing upon myself slavery. As a girl I could devote all my time to myself. Then I was light hearted because I was free. I had no one's clothes to mend except my own. I had no household duties. I spent my leisure time going to theaters, balls and such other amusements as I preferred. Oh, woe is me that I should have married and become a slave!"

And he replied: "From morning till night I am downtown making money for you to spend for gowns and hats that won't stay in fashion long enough to get the 'new' off them. I must provide house rent and sustenance for you and the thousand other things that you require. I never go fishing or shooting, as I did before I was married, for now, having your necessities to supply, I have nothing left for indulging in those sports of which I used to be so fond. My fowling piece went into a fur coat for you, and you are wearing my fishing tackle on your head. Oh, woe is me that I ever married and became a slave!"

The duties of the wife were changed. The husband returned to the use of safety pins in lieu of buttons. She had no longer time to mend his linen. His clothing remained torn.

The baby needed all her attention, requiring more changes of clothing in a day than her husband needed in a week. She spent much time preparing the child's food. He had colic often, during which she must dandle him, walk with him and give him medicines. Every day he must have the sun and air in his carriage, and his mother, unwilling to trust him to a nurse, trundled him herself. When she was not trundling him she was making or buying clothes for him, and when she was not doing these she was receiving instructions from the doctor as to what she should put into his stomach and what she should put over it.

When she was not trundling him she was making or buying clothes for him, and when she was not doing these she was receiving instructions from the doctor as to what she should put into his stomach and what she should put over it.

One morning the husband, who had taken care of the baby during the night that his wife might get "a little sleep," began the old plaint, "I am your slave." This awakened her own former words, "It is I who am your slave."

This started the wrangle again. Words were getting high when there was a diversion. There came a sudden yell from the crib. Both rushed to see what was wrong with the baby.

"Here is our master," said the father. "We are both his slaves." But it was a new kind of slavery that had come upon them. Somehow they accepted it as a matter of course, but they were in constant terror lest they lose their sovereign.
