THE SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE, NORTH PLATTE, NEBRASKA.

KING HAS A FINAL CONFERENCE WITH HIS FRIENDS AT THE MOUTH OF KHYBER PASS AND PREPARES FOR THE JOURNEY INTO STRANGE COUNTRY.

Synopsis .- At the beginning of the world war Capt. Athelstan King of the British Indian army and of its secret service, is ordered to Delhi to meet Yasmini, a dancer, and go with her to Khinjan to quiet the outlaws there who are said by sples to be preparing for a jihad or hory war. On his way to Delhi King quietly foils a plan to assassinate him and gets evidence that Yasmini is after him. He meets Rewa Gunga, Yasmini's man, who says she has already gone north, and at her town house witnesses queer dances.

Bangar narrowly, yet he could not detect the slightest symptom of emo-

"Explain?" said the Rangar. "Who

"Ah !" said King. "You are positive

"Sahib, when she speaks it is best to

"There's a train leaves for the

"You'll want a pass up the line.

"One," said the Rangar, and King

"Be there on time and see about

He folded the list of names that the

The Rangar nodded.

CHAPTER IV-Continued.

The Rangar's eyes blazed for a section ond and then grew cold again, as King did not fail to observe. All this while can explain foolishness? It means the women danced on, in time to wall- that another fat general has made aning flute music, until, it seemed from other fat mistake !" nowhere, a loveller woman than any she has started for the North?" of them appeared in their midst, sitting cross-legged with a flat basket at her knees. She sat with arms raised believe! She told me she will go. and swayed from the waist as if in a Therefore I am ready to lead King delirium. Her arms moved in narrowsahib up the Khyber to her!" ing circles, higher and higher above the basket lid, and the lid began to North tonight," said King. rise. It was minutes before the bodies of two great king cobras could be made out, moving against the woman's How many servants? Three-fourspangled dress with hoods raised, hiss- how many?" ing the cobra's hate-song that is prewas instantly suspicious of the modlude to the poison-death.

esty of that allowance; however he They struck at the woman, one after the other, and she leaped out of their wrote out a pass for Rewa Gunga and range, swift and as supple as they. one servant and gave it to him. Instantly then she joined in the dance, with the snakes striking right and your own reservation," he said. "I'll left at her. Left and right she swayed attend to Ismail's pass myself." to avoid them, far more gracefully than a matador avoids the bull and Rangar had marked and wrote somecourting a deadlier peril than he-polthing on the back. Then he begged sonous, two to his one. As she danced an envelope, and Rewa Gunga had one she whirled both arms above her head brought to him. He sealed the list in and cried as the werewolves are said the envelope, addressed it and beckoned Ismail again. to do on stormy nights.

"Do you do this often?" wondered King, in a calm aside to Rewa Gunga, turning half toward him and taking his fice, where you were before, the babu eyes off the dance without any very there will tell you where Saunders great effort.

Rewa Gunga clapped his hands and to him. Then come and find me at the the dance ceased. The woman spirited Star of India hotel and help me to her snakes away. The blind was bathe and change my clothes." drawn upward and in a moment all "To hear is to obey!" boomed Ismail, was normal again with the punkah bowing; but his last glance was for swinging slowly overhead, except that Rewa Gunga, and he d

Around them the clatter of the station | Saunders led the way through a modcrowd began to die, and Parsimony ern iron door, into what had once been In a shabby uniform went round to a royal prince's stables. In gloom that was only thrown into lower lights. "Are you sure-"

King's merry eyes looked into Sauntric lights, a long line of barred and ders' as if there were no world war locked converted horse stalls ran down really and they two were puppets in a comedy.

"-are you absolutely certain Yasmini is in Delhi?"

"No," said Saunders. "What I swear to is that she has not left by train. the light, and they could see more of She's the most elusive individual in him than he could of them. At the Asia! One person in the world knows first cell he raised his left hand and where she is, unless she has an accommade the gold bracelet on his wrist plice. My information's negative. I clink against the steel bars. know she has not gone by-

King struck a match and held it and felt the bracelet with his finger out, so the sentence was unfinished; the first few puffs of the astonishing cigar wiped out all memory of the missing word. And then King changed the subject.

"Those men I asked you to arrest-7"

"Nabbed"-puff-"every one of 'em !" -puff-puff-"all under"-puff-puff-"lock and key,-best smoke I ever tasted."

"Well-I'll go along with you if you like and look them over."

Both tone and manner gave Saunders credit for the suggestion, and Saunders seemed to like it. There is nothing like following up, in football, war or courtship.

"I see you're a judge of a cigar," said King, and Saunders purred, all men being fools to some extent, and the only trouble being to demonstrate the fact.

They had started for the station entrance when a nasal voice began intoning, "Cap-teen King sahib-Capteen King sahib !" and a telegraph messenger passed them with his book under his arm. King whistled him. A moment later he was tearing open an official urgent telegram and writing a string of figures in pencil across the top. Then he de-coded swiftly:

Adv' " are Yasmini was in Delhi as re "Take this to Saunders sahib!" he cently as six this evening. Fail to under-stand your inability to get in touch. Have you tried at her house? Matters in Khy-ber district much less satisfactory. Word ordered. "Go first to the telegraph offrom O-C Khyber rifles to effect that lashkar is collecting. Better sweep up sahib may be found. Deliver the letter in Delhi and proceed northward as quick-ly as compatible with caution. L. M. L.

"Good news?" asked Saunders, blowing smoke through his nose. "Excellent. Where's my man? Here door slammed King continued down must have known our fix. the line with his left wrist held high shouldn't have asked." so that the occupant of each cell in turn could see the bracelet.

-you-Ismail !"

"May God be with thee!" came the fully. instant greeting from each cell until down toward the farther end. The occupants of the last six cells were sllent. He had scarcely finished doing that when Ismall strode in, slamming the great Iron door hehind him, jangling a bunch of keys and looking more than ever like somebody out of the Old l'estament.

"Open every door except those whose numbers I have rubbed out!" King ordered him.

Ismail proceeded to obey as if that were the least improbable order in all the world. It took him two minutes to select the pass-key and determine how it worked, then the doors flew open one after another in quick succontrast by a wide-spread row of eleccession.

> "Come out!" he growled. "Come out !-- Come out !" although King had not ordered that.

King could see of the men within was King went and stood under the center light with his left arm bared. The prisoners emerging like dead men out of tombs, blinked at the bright lightsaw him-then the bracelet-and sa> luted. "May God be with thee!" growled each of them.

They stood still then, awaiting fresh developments. It did not seem to occur to any one of them as strange that a British officer in khaki uniform should be sporting Yasmini's talisman ; the thing was apparently sufficient explanation in itself.

"Ye all know this?" he asked, holding up his wrist. "Whose is this?" "Hers!" The answer was monosyl- thy. lable and instant from all thirty throats.

King lit a cheroot and made mental note of the wisdom of referring to her by pronoun, not by name. "And I? Who am I?" he asked.

"Her messenger! Who else? Thou art he who shall take us to the 'Hills!' She promised."

"I shall start for the 'Hills' at dawn," King said slowly, and he watched their eyes gleam at the news. No caged tiger is as wretched as a prisoned hillman. No freed bird wings more wildly for the open. No moth comes more ing!" answered Ismail. "He is not foolishly back to the flame again. It at all like other sahibs I have bad was easy to take pity on them-probably not one of whom knew pity's meaning.

"Is there any among you who would care to come-?" "Ah-h-h !"

"Will ye obey me and him?" he asked, laying his hand on Ismall's shoulder, as much to let them see the bracelet again as for any other rea-

"Aye! If we fail, Allah do more to us !"

King laughed. "Ye shall leave this place as my prisoners. Here ye have no friends. Here ye must obey. But floor. what when ye come to your 'Hills' at last? Can one man hold thirty men prisoner's then? In the 'Hills' will ye still obey me?"

The answer to that was unexpected.

She

King smilled. "Perfectly good op-, portunity for me, sir!" he said cheer-

"So you seem to think. But look out for that woman, King-she's dangerous. She's got the brains of Asia coupled with Western energy! I think she's on our side, and I know he believes it; but watch her !"

"Ham dekta hai !" King grinned. But the older man continued to look as if he pitled him.

"If you get through alive, come and tell me about it afterward. Now, mind you do! I'm awfully interested, but as for envying you-

"Envy !" King almost squealed. He made the bedsprings rattle as he jumped. "I wouldn't swap jobs with General French, sir !"

"Nor with me, I suppose !" "Nor with you, sir!"

"Goodby, then. Goodby, King, my boy. Goodby, Athelstan. Your broth er's up the Khyber, isn't he? Give him my regards. Goodby !"

CHAPTER VI.

Long before dawn the thirty prisoners and Ismail squatted in a little herd on the up-platform of a railway station, shepherded by King, who smoked a cheroot some twenty paces away, sitting on an unmarked chest of medicines. He seemed absorbed in a book on surgery. Ismail nursed the new handbag on his knees, picking everlastingly at the lock and wondering audibly what the bag contained to an accompaniment of low-growled sympa-

"I am his servant-for she said soand he said so. Then why-why in Allah's name-am I not to have the key of this little bag that holds so little and is so light?"

"A razor would slit the leather easily," suggested one of the herd. "Then, later, the bag might be pushed violently against some sharp thing, to explain the cut."

Ismail shook his head.

"Why? What could he do to thee?" "It is because I know not what he would do to me that I will do nothdealings with. This man does unexpected things. This man is not mad, he has a devil. I have it in my heart to love this man. But such talk is foolishness. We are all her men !"

"Aye! We are her men !" came the chorus, so that King looked up and watched them over the open book.

At dawn, when the train pulled out, the thirty prisoners sat safely locked in third-class compartments. King lay lazily on the cushions of a firstclass carriage in the rear, and Ismail attended to the careful packing of soda water bottles in the icebox on the

"Shall I open the little bag, sahib?" he asked.

"Put it over there !" King ordered, "Set it down!" Ismail obeyed and King laid his book God Be With Thee!" Boomed the Prisoner's Voice.

"May God be with thee!" boomed prisoner's voice in Pashtu.

"Didn't know that fellow was handcuffed," said Saunders. "Did you hear the ring? They should have been taken off. Leaving his irons on has de him polite, though one side of a lean-to building. All that the whites of their eyes. And they did

He had to pass between them and

A moment later he cursed himself.

not look friendly.

the seductive smell remained, that was like the early-morning breath of all the different flowers of India. the room King looked into the Rangar's

"If she were here," said the Rangar, a little grimly-with a trace of disappointment in his tone-"you would not snatch your eyes away like that! Perhaps you shall see her dance some day! Ab-here is Ismail," he added in an altered tone of voice. He seemed relieved at sight of the Afridi.

Bursting through the glass-bead curtains at the door, the great savage strode down the room, holding out a telegram. With a murmur of conventional apology King tore the envelope and in a second his eyes were ablaze with something more than wonder. A mystery, added to a mystery, stirred all the zeal in him. But in a second he had sweated his excitement down.

As She Danced She Whirled Both Arms Above Her Head and Cried as the Werewolves Are Said to Do on Stormy Nights.

"Read that, will you?" he said, passing it to Rews Gunga. It was not in sypher, but in plain every-day Engfilte has not gone North. She is still a Delhi. Suit your own movements to your plans.

until he had met the Rangar's eyes. him When Ismail had gone striding down eyes with that engaging frankness of his that disarms so many people. "Then you'll be on the train to night?" he asked. "To hear is to obey! With pleas ure, sahib !"

"Then good-by until this evening." King bowed very civilly and walked out, rather unsteadily because his head ached. Probably nobody else, except the Rangar, could have guessed what an ordeal he had passed through or how near he had been to losing selfcommand.

In the street he found a gharry after a while and drove to his hotel. And before Ismail came he took a stroll through a bazaar, where he made a few strange purchases. In the hotel lobby he invested in a leather bag with a good lock, in which to put them. Later on Ismail came and proved himself an efficient body-servant.

That evening Ismail carried the leather bag and found his place on the train, and that was not so difficult, because the trains running North were nearly empty, although the platforms were all crowded. As he stood at the carriage door with Ismail near him, a man named Saunders slipped through the crowd and sought him out.

"Arrested 'em all !" he grinned. King did not answer. He was watching Rewa Gunga, followed by a servont, hurrying to a reserved compartment at the front end of the train. The Rangar waved to him and he waved back. The engine gave a preliminary shrick and the giant Ismail nudged King's elbow in impatient warning. There was no more sign of Rewa Gunga, who of the unaccustomed weight on his left and keeper of the queen's secrets !" had evidently settled down in his compartment for the night.

"Get my bag out again !" King ordered, and Ismail stared.

"Get out my bag, I said !"

"To hear is to obey!" Ismail grumbled, reaching with his long arm through the window.

The engine shricked again, some to move.

"You've missed it !" said Saunders, amused at Ismail's frantic disappointment.

CHAPTER V.

The rear lights of the train he had not taken swayed out of Delhi station and King grinned as he wiped the handkerchief. Bebind him towered the hook-nosed Ismail, resentful of the uneyed the proffered black cheroots sus- walls. "Can you explain?" asked King in piciously, accepted one with an air of

The giant came and towered above

"You swore she went North!" "Ha, sahib! To Peshawur she went!" "I have a telegram here that says she is in Delhi !"

He patted his coat, where the inner pocket bulged.

"Nay, then the tar lies, for I saw her go with these two eyes of mine !" "It is not wise to lie to me, my friend," King assured him, so pleasantly that none could doubt he was telling at present he's useful 'as is' for a detruth.

"If I lie may I eat dirt!" Ismail answered him.

Inches lent the Afridi dignity, but dignity has often been used as a stalking horse for untruth. King nodded, present, and even he gets most of his and it was not possible to judge by his money out of his private business. The expression whether he believed or not. [Germans pay All a little, and he traps ing to Saunders. "She seems at any rate to wish it believed she has gone train. Where are the prisoners?"

"In the old Mir Khan palace. Shall we take this gharry?"

With Ismail up beside the driver nursing King's bag and looking like a great grim vulture about to eat the fooled-'specially the Germans-and horse, they drove back through swarming streets in the direction of the river. raj. Nobody ever fooled that woman, King seemed to have lost all interest in nor ever will if my belief goes for crowds. He sat staring ahead in anything!" silence, although Saunders made more than one effort to engage him in conversation.

"No!" he said at last suddenly-so that Saunders jumped.

"No what?" "No need to stay here. I've got what came for !"

"What was that?" asked Saunders, wrist, he moved his arm so that the sleeve drew and he could see the edge him along to me?" asked King. of the great gold bracelet Rewa Gunga had given him in Yasmini's name.

"Know anything of Rewa Gunga?" he asked suddenly again.

"Not much. I've seen him. I've spoken with him, and I've had to stand impudence from him-twice. I've been] body whistled, and the train began tipped off more than once to let him leave me in here alone !" alone because he's her man. He does to the police' all right."

They began to approach an age-old palace near the river, and Saunders den of tigers?" he asked. "Or a nest at least as far as up the Khyber! Q. whispered a password when an armed of cobras? Or get the flery furnace E. D., sir !" guard halted them. They were halted ready? That 'God be with thee' stuff' again at a gloomy gateway where an is habit-they say it with unction beofficer came out to look them over; by fore they knife a man !" sweat from his face with a dripping his leave they left the gharry and followed him under the arch until their chuckled; and it is a fact that few asked him. "I mean, didn't she try to heels rang on stone paving in a big ill- men can argue with him when he get them dry-nursed by the sirkar in expected. In front of him Saunders lighted courtyard surrounded by high laughs quietly in that way. "Send me

"Where did you arrest them?" King asked when Saunders came to a stand under a light,

"All in one place. At All's." "Who and what is All?"

"Thief-crimp-procurer -- Prussian spy and any other evil thing that takes his fancy! Runs a combination gambling hell and boarding house. Let's 'em run into debt and blackmails 'em. All's in the kaiser's pay-that's known ! We'll get him when we want him, but coy." -"You wouldn't call these men prosperous, then?"

"Not exactly! All is the only spy out of the North who prospers much at "Let's make a move," he said, turn- the hillmen when they come southlets 'em gamble-gets 'em into debtthey can get away when they've paid North. I'll take the early morning him what they owe. Yasmini sends and pays their board and gambling debts, and she's our man, so to speak. She coaxes all their stories out of 'em and primes 'em with a few extra good ones into the bargain. Everybody's exceptin', of course, Yasmini and the > "Um-m-m !" King rubbed his chin. "Know anything of my man Ismail?"

"Sure! He's one of Yasmini's pets. She bailed him out of All's three years ago and he worships her. It was he who broke the leg and ribs of a puprajah a month or two ago for putting on too much dog in her reception room. He's Ursus out of 'Quo Vadis!' but King was silent again. Conscious He's dog, desperado, stalking horse

"Then why d'you suppose she passed "Dunno! This is your little mystery, not mine !" "Glad you appreciate that! Do me favor, will you?"

"Anything in reason."

"Get the keys to all these cells-send 'em in here to me by Ismall-and Saunders whistled and wiped sweat ticklish errands for her, or so they from his glistening face, for in spite promised 'em more than she has been say. He's what you might call 'known of windows wide open to the courtyard able to perform. So I provide perit was hotter than a furnace room.

"Mayn't I have you thrown into a

"Fil be careful, then," King

Ismail knelt-seized his hand-and pressed the gold bracelet to his lips! cheroots. The theme of antiseptica In turn, every one of them filed by, ceased to exercise its charm over him. knelt reverently and kissed the bracelet!

"Saw ye ever a hillman do that before?" asked Ismail. "They will obey thee! Have no fear!"

"Then come !" ordered King, turning his back confidently on thirty savages whom Saunders, for instance, would have preferred to drive in front of him, after first seeing them handcuffed. "Each lock has a key, but some keys fit all locks," says the Eastern proverb. King has been chosen for many ticklish errands in his time, and Saunders is still in Delhi.

The prisoners were left squatting under the eyes and bayonets of a very suspicious prison guard, who made no secret of being ready for all concelvable emergencies. One enthusiast drew the cartridge out of his breech chamber and licked it at intervals of a minute or two, to the very great interest of the hillmen, who memorized every detail that by any stretch of imagination might be expected to improve their own shooting when they should get home again.

King found his way on foot through a maze of streets to a place where he was admitted through one door after another by sentries who saluted when he had whispered to them. He ended by sitting on the end of the bed of a gray-headed man who owns three titles and whose word is law between the borders of a province. To him he talked as one schoolboy to a bigger one, because the gray-haired man had understanding, and hence sympathy. "I don't envy you!" said he under the sheet. "There's the release for your prisoners. Take it-and take them! Whatever possessed you to want such a gift?"

"Well, sir-first place, she doesn't want to seem to be connected with me. Second place, she has left Delhi-and she did not mean to leave those men. Third place, if those thirty men had been anything but her particular pet gang they'd either have been over the border or else in jall before now-just like all the others. For some reason that I don't pretend to understand, she formances. She gets the credit for it. I get a pretty good personal following

The man in bed nodded. "Not bad." he said.

"Didn't she make some effort to get those men away from All's?" King some way?"

down to light another of his black He peeled off his tunic, changed his shirt and lay back in sweet contentment. Headed for the "Hills," who would not be contented, who had been born in their very shadow?---in their shadow, of a line of Britons who have all been buried there!

"Look Out for the Woman, King-She's Dangerous. She's Got the Brains of Asia Coupled With Western Energy."

"The day after tomorrow I'll see snow!" he promised himself, And Ismail, grinning with yellow teeth through a gap in his wayward beard, understood and sympathized.

Forward in the third-class carriages the prisoners hugged themselves and crooned as they met old landmarks and recognized the changing scenery. There was a new, cleaner tang in the hot wind that spoke of the "Hills" and home!

At Peshawur the train was shortened to three coaches and started up the spur-track, that leads to Jamrud, where a fort cowers in the very throat of the dreadfulest gorge in Asia-the Khyber pass.

The Rangar deserts King and his native escort in a dangerous part of Khyber pass, and the special agent tastes more weird adventure.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)