Mrs. Langford Passes Away.

Following an illness of several months due to heart affection Mrs. Amy Bee Langford passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Chas. Yost, Friday forenoon. Death was hastened by a slight paralytic stroke a couple of weeks previous. The funeral will be held at the Methodist church this afternoon at 2:30.

Mrs. Langford was born in Leamington, Ontario, Canada, July 7, 1856, and was united in marriage to R. H. Langford in 1874. The following year they came to North Platte. To this union ten children were born, two dying in infancy. Those surviving are Ray C. of this city, Verne living in Chicago, Harold who is in the service at Camp Cody, Mrs. Chas. Yost, Mrs. Clara Aldridge and Miss Alice of this city, Mrs. Amy Barrett of Salt Lake and Miss Elsie now in government service at Washington.

Mrs. Langford was a most excellent woman, and though suffering adverse circumstances when the children were young, she by earnest effort and splendid management held her family together until they reached manhood and womanhood, and the sacrifices she made more strongly endeared the children to her.

In the passing of Mrs. Langford North Platte loses a woman who was highly esteemed by every acquaintance, a christian woman, a devoted mother and one who will ever be kindly remembered by all.

Many Attend Recital.

The musical recital and cantata given at the Keith Friday evening by the pupils of St. Patrick's school was attended by an audience that well filled the house. The piano numbers were excellently executed speaking well for the training and instructions the pupils had received at the hands of the teachers. The cantata was a most pleasing feature and was well flawlessly produced.

A Call For Service.

Professional men, tradesmen, shopmen and all classes of labor in towns to be pledged and organized as a voluntary harvest force to be used in emergency.

A plan to induce towns people to help in the harvest fields of Lincoln county in emergency, as outlined in the U. S. Service Bulletin of May 28th, is now being presented to the people of North Platte, and will be extended to all towns along the line of the Union Pacific. The following pledge card is to be filled out:

"I hereby pledge myself personally to perform days work in assisting farmers in this territory in emergency work.

I hereby agree to release of my employees to perform similar service if called upon.

I hereby agree and pledge myself to urge my employees to use as much of their annual vacation for farm assistance work as may be possible.

Telephone No.

We all realize that when the grain which now promises to be a bumper crop, is ripe, it must be harvested in a short time, thus preventing any possible loss by hail or storm. Much extra help will be required, and the U. S. Employment Service, through District Superintendent Barkman, is doing all it possibly can to provide this extra help, but should an emergency arise and not sufficient help be at hand to harvest the crops, let the towns people be prepared to assist in this work, so necessary and vital to the conduct of the war and the welfare of the people.

This is not to be free voluntary help, but is to be paid for by the farmer at a reasonable and equitable wage. It being advised that the recommendations of the Farmers' War Council in regard to "Farm Wage Set" be adhered to as far as practicable.

Following are the recommendations: "1. All help employed temporarily shall be paid by the hour instead of by the day.

2. Ten hours of field labor shall be considered a day's work, and that the question of overtime shall be left between the individual employer and his employees.

3. The time for beginning and quitting work shall be decided by the employer according to weather and crop conditions.

4. That the competent emergency help in wheat harvest and stacking may be paid a maximum wage of 45 cents per hour and board and unskilled and less competent help be paid according to their ability, and that other experienced emergency help aside from wheat harvest, stacking time during the months of June, July and August, be paid not to exceed 40 cents per hour and board, depending upon the skill of the laborer.

5. These recommendation do not apply in any way to permanent labor hired by the month or year."

We are urging the people to volunteer for this work. Let it be a community affair. Enlist the retired farmers in your section, enlist the preachers and school teachers who at this time will be on vacations.

Start a movement, if necessary to close your stores in order to afford an opportunity for yourself and your help to put over this campaign. It is just as important as a Y. M. C. A., a Red Cross, or a Liberty Bond effort. It is a fine opportunity for business men to get their harness marks under their collars instead of under their breeching. If you can play golf, you can shock wheat and if you can't shock wheat, you may be able to run a binder or drive a team to a header barge.

Pledge cards are now with A. F. Beeler, Examiner in Charge, U. S. Employment Service, who solicits you to fill out your pledges at the earliest opportunity.

"There's one more river that we're going to cross and that's the river Rhine" is a song that will appeal to every rich blooded American. Hear Dr. Mitchell sing it at the Minstrel show.

REPORT TODAY

By KITTY PARSONS.

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march pealed out majestically as the bride and bridegroom came slowly down the aisle.

Eleanor had always declared that she would not race out of the church, the way some couples did, and she smiled happily at the many friends who were so eagerly watching the bridal procession.

"You were beautiful, my dear, perfectly beautiful!" declared one of the guests at the reception, a little later.

"And the bridegroom in his uniform is quite the handsomest thing I have ever seen. I don't wonder you married him. Has he a long leave?"

"A whole week," returned Eleanor, "and we've planned such a wonderful trip!"

The happiness of the newly married couple seemed to be shared by everyone else, and the entire bridal party sat down to the wedding breakfast amid much laughter and merriment.

The best man was just proposing a toast to the bride and groom when someone handed the captain a telegram.

"Bad news, dear?" asked Eleanor apprehensively.

"The worst possible. They want me to report at headquarters today. Something important has come up, I suppose."

"Oh, Allen, how cruel! Right in the middle of our wedding, too! You'll have to hurry, too," she added, rising to the occasion like a true soldier's wife.

"There's a train that leaves at one-thirty and it's after one o'clock now. Come on and I'll drive you to the station."

"You are the most wonderful girl in the world," Allen told her for the thousandth time on the way to the station.

"It won't be for long, darling—it just can't be," she choked, as for a moment she clung to him helplessly.

But it was not until the last guest had gone that Eleanor threw herself on her bed and sobbed bitterly. It had been so sudden and unexpected, and they planned everything so carefully. Her trunk had gone and Allen had paid for their rooms at the little mountain inn, where they were going.

Suddenly Eleanor sat up on her bed, with an inspiration.

"I'll go just the same," she declared, "just to see what it is like. Everything's ready and I can come back tomorrow if I want to. It may be queer to go off on a wedding trip alone, but it's a lot nicer than staying here and having all the neighbors condole with me. I'll do it!"

In a few moments Eleanor appeared before her mother, dressed for her journey, and the astonished lady looked at her in amazement. But Mrs. Osgood was a sensible woman and not easily disturbed, so she made little objection to her daughter's plans.

"If any word comes from Allen before I get back, please wire at once, mother dear. I'll be a good girl, so don't worry. Good-by."

On the thirty-mile train ride Eleanor allowed herself little time for thought, but knitted frantically all the way. The inn was some distance from the station, and the drive in the crisp winter air was delightful. There were few guests, and the kindly little old lady who kept the house did not bother her with useless questions, but took her to a cheerful sitting room where a great wood fire lay blazing on the hearth.

"Drink this tea, my dear, and rest yourself a bit. It's five now, so you'll not want dinner till seven. If you want anything, ring."

"I don't wonder he loved it here," thought Eleanor, and her eyes filled with sudden tears.

After a while her tired lids drooped and she fell asleep.

It was almost seven o'clock when Eleanor was awakened by a sound in the room.

"It must be Mrs. Green, to tell me supper is ready," she considered drowsily, and sat up on the couch. Then her eyes almost popped out of her head, for sitting in a big chair by the fire was her husband.

"Allen!" she cried, "am I dreaming again?"

"Not a bit of it!" he assured her, taking her in his arms. "It was all a mistake—the telegram was supposed to read: 'Report at headquarters in a week from today.' Stupid, but it might have been worse. I telephoned you at once and your mother told me you had come here—so I took the next train after you—are you glad to see me?"

"Glad? Why, I can't believe my eyes or ears, it's so simply wonderful. I don't honestly believe I ever appreciated you before. But I do now, and I'm too happy for words."

Allen kissed her tenderly and they sat down and talked as if they had not seen each other for years. At last Mrs. Greene actually did come to announce dinner.

"Could you eat anything?" asked Allen.

"Could I! I'm simply starved. It may not be romantic, but I am."

"So am I," admitted the bridegroom. "Then we'll make this the wedding breakfast that we both missed today. Come on, Captain Searies." And taking him by the hand, the bride pulled him willingly towards the dining room, where they did full credit to the inn's cookery.

Young Married Men Listed.

Forty-four young men of Lincoln county who have been married since May 18th, 1917, have been listed by the local registration board and their names sent to the provost marshal's office at Washington. This action was directed by the provost marshal for the purpose of determining whether or not these men should be placed in class one. It is probable that some of these young married men will soon be called into service along with the few remaining members of class one.
