

"Old Eyes"

This is a condition which usually comes in middle life. It is perfectly natural. The inner lens of the eye loses some of its elasticity with advancing years. It becomes harder to see clearly objects near the eye. Paper and books are held farther away than formerly. All that is needed is a pair of properly fitted glasses. Don't try to pick them out yourself. That is dangerous. Let Clinton fit you.

HOME GUARDS PROGRAM FOR FORENOON OF JULY FOURTH.

The forenoon program on July 4th has been turned over to the Home Guards of Lincoln county, and will include a big parade, an exhibition drill by the cavalry troops, and a ball game between members of the south side and the north side cavalry troops.

In addition there will be a fifteen-minute oration by J. J. Halligan at the court house park, and selections by the Home Guards glee club and the band. These exercises will occur immediately after the parade.

The parade will start from the court house square at ten o'clock and in line will be members of the Red Cross, and the Home Guards companies of Brady, Hershey, Sutherland and North Platte, about six hundred men marching in columns of four. In line will be the Home Guards band, the Dickens band and the Home Guard drum and bugle corps.

Following the patriotic exercises at the court house park the cavalry troop will give exhibition drill on the old play ground on south Dewey street, and following this a five inning game of ball will be played at the old ball park between two cavalry troops.

COMFORTABLE, CONVENIENT, NEEDFUL.

Whether your occupation is one that requires mental or manual work, you need good eyesight.

If you cannot see objects near to and those in the distance with equal clarity, then you need KRYPTOK glasses, the invisible bifocals.

KRYPTOKS (pronounced Crip-tocks) are comfortable and restful to your eyes because they give a perfect near and far view without lines or humps to blur or obstruct the vision.

They are convenient because they can be worn all day long without changing.

They are needful, particularly at this time, because they enable you to accomplish more and better work in less time.

Our scientific methods of examination—our care in fitting—our skill in lens making are our bonds that we can satisfy your every optical requirement.

If glasses will not help you, we will gladly tell you so. See HARRY DIXON & SONS' Optometrist.

Passenger Conductors Marry. Two passenger conductors on the Omaha-North Platte run have recently been married. They are Austin Taylor and Pete Dunbar. Mr. Taylor married Mrs. Geo. Shindle, who had been making this city her home, while Mr. Dunbar's bride was formerly cashier of the bank in the Brandies store in Omaha. The Tribune extends the glad hand to both.

Harshfield Gets Ninety Days. John Harshfield was found guilty of sedition by the federal court jury Friday afternoon and was sentenced by Judge Woodruff to serve ninety days in the county jail at Grand Island. His confinement will begin within thirty days from the date of his sentence. This time was given in order that he might care for his crops and arrange his business matters.

Soldiers, and More Soldiers. Trainload after trainload of soldier boys have passed east through North Platte since Saturday morning, these representing part of 40,000 that have been routed east over the Union Pacific, the C. M. & St. P. and North Western roads, some of which are yet to come. They come from Camp Fremont, Camp Lewis and other camps on the Pacific coast. While the men do not know to which eastern camp they have been assigned they feel confident that their stay on the Atlantic seaboard will be brief and that they will shortly embark for overseas duty. Before the movement of troops began from Camp Lewis 77,000 men were stationed there, but when this movement is ended in July only a few of the older men will be left.

War Savings Societies Formed. County Agent Barber reports that about one hundred war savings societies were organized in Lincoln county last Friday afternoon and evening as a result of the campaign made that day. In some localities rain interfered with the evening meeting else the number organized would have been greater. Thirty or more men of North Platte visited different sections of the county and addressed the meetings, going in squads of two and each squad addressed an afternoon an evening meeting.

"Wolves of the Border," a western picture in which the neighbors iron out their differences with shooting irons, will be the attraction at the Crystal Wednesday. Roy Stewart is featured.

Complimentary to her daughter Carrie who attained her sixteenth birthday Thursday, Mrs. Wm. Madison entertained twenty-seven friends of the family. The birthday cake was decorated with sixteen flags, and the house decorations were in the national colors.

Nine trainloads of troops enroute from Pacific coast camps to eastern camps preparatory to going across passed through Saturday. Seven more trains went via Denver the same day. The boys left the cars while here and indulged in all kinds of antics on the streets.

W. E. Shuman and N. E. Buckley made a trip to the extreme south part of the county Friday to address two meetings called to organize war-savings societies, but found that in both instances the societies had been formed the previous Tuesday evening. Their drive of ninety-two miles was therefore useless.

Your favorite stars of filmdom, Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne play for you in the powerful story "The Voice of Conscience." Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Rreu will also be there to keep you in the best of humor. Better come.

Mrs. James Golden was hostess at a miscellaneous shower Thursday evening complimentary to Miss Amy Young, who is soon to become a bride. Card games were the entertaining feature. The bride-to-be received many pretty and useful gifts among which were an electric percolator and an iron, a gift from the girls at the General Hospital. Mrs. Golden was assisted by Mrs. Loren Purdy.

HIS NEW JOB

By VINCENT G. PERRY.

Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Promotion! Assistant manager of that large departmental store! It almost seemed too good to be true to Robert Campbell, and for 15 minutes after he had received notification of his advancement he could do nothing but sit and wonder at his good luck. Wouldn't Carrie be proud and glad. He hurried to the telephone booth and stopped as he heard Carrie's voice.

"I care for you only. Meet me tonight. I love you, dearie, and I want you for my own," she was saying over the wire.

Bob put his hand to his head. He could hardly believe his ears until she repeated the same words, and then as she caught sight of him, said: "That is all, thank you," as curtly as she could and hung up the receiver. But Bob was not deceived. He had heard enough.

"Did you want to see me, Bobbie," she said in the same old way.

"No thank you," he gulped. "You had better finish your telephone conversation."

"I had finished," she answered, without showing any embarrassment.

"I don't think you had." He turned about and left her. Carrie looked after him in wonder. She made her way back to the desk that she had occupied for the first time that day.

"Have you heard about Mr. Campbell's promotion, Miss Aldeson?" the girl who had charge of Carrie's old counter, asked. "He is to be assistant manager. Promotions seem to have gone the rounds."

"That is splendid for him," Carrie exclaimed in delight. "I am so glad, for he has worked hard for promotion."

When she was left alone Carrie began to make excuses for Bob's coldness. He was filling his role as assistant manager.

When noon hour arrived no Bob appeared. Carrie waited for nearly half an hour with her coat and hat on before the realization that he was not coming came to her. So Bob had let his promotion come between them—she had to acknowledge it to herself. She was not good enough for an assistant manager's wife. It was hard to credit Bob with such an ungrateful spirit, for he had always been so kind and considerate. The little home they had planned to build, with the garden and rose hedge had been almost real but apparently Bob had forgotten. An assistant manager would be able to afford more than a little home and could figure in society. The manager was past middle age and in time Bob would probably step into his place. Then he could marry an heiress—the president's pretty daughter or someone else equally impressive. Bob was handsome, ambitious and progressive. He would be a big man some day and their little love affair could really mean nothing to him. That she was pretty, ambitious and progressive as well did not enter Carrie's mind. Whatever she had done was to increase her savings in order to help Bob when the time came for the little home. As Carrie realized that all her dreams were shattered she burst into tears.

By the time the lunch hour was over she had dried her eyes and was busily working at her desk when the assistant manager made his appearance. Bob started as he caught sight of the new head of the department.

"I beg your pardon. I did not know that you had been promoted to this desk," he said in a reserved tone.

Carrie did not look up.

"Will you please prepare a report, giving details of the girls in your department, as to length of service and salaries they are now receiving. I would also like monthly reports on the sales made by each saleswoman, in future, Miss Aldeson."

The "Miss Aldeson" was too much for Carrie.

"I will make the first report, Mr. Campbell," she said icily, "but you must speak to my successor about the monthly report for I am to give my notice tomorrow night."

"You are to be married, I presume, Miss Aldeson." Bob felt his heart sinking.

"How dare you insult me," Carrie flashed. "Is it not enough to slight me as you have, because you have been promoted and consider yourself above your old friends, without taunting me. No; I am not going to be married because I have been silly enough to waste my affections upon a man that was not worthy of them. I am leaving because I refuse to work under an assistant manager who is not a gentleman."

Bob's cheeks were scarlet. "How could you expect me to act differently," he said, "when I heard you confessing your love for another man over the telephone this morning?"

"How dare you—" Carrie began, but stopped with a gasp of understanding. "Oh, Bob, how silly of you!" she cried as she rummaged through her desk for her order book. "Here it is; I was giving an order for some popular songs for the music counter. That is what you heard!"

"I was an idiot," he laughed. "I have been unhappy all morning over it, too. It spoiled all the pleasure of my promotion. The minute I was notified of it I thought of you and the joy the news would bring to you. We can build the little home any time now, dear, and we can have a rose hedge the first year."
