

1—New American army field kitchen which can cook for 1,500 men in 30 minutes. 2—Rev. Mr. McFarland of the American army and nurses inspecting the village of Vitry-le-François, rebuilt by American engineers. 3—German emerging from cellar where he had been waiting to surrender to the British.

IN THE CAMP OF A FRENCH REFUGEE FAMILY

No important member of the family was left behind when this French family fled on the approach of the German hordes, south of the Marne, before their advance was stopped by the counter-offensive of the French and American troops. The family took refuge in the forest and erected a portable shelter to protect them from the winds and rain.

YANKEE FIGHTERS NEARING COAST OF FRANCE

A host of khaki-clad soldiers of the United States lining the rails of an American lighter as they get their first view of France where they are about to disembark.

BRITISH TROOPS LANDING AT VLADIVOSTOK

British troops who are engaged in the movement to rescue Russia from a state of chaos are seen in the picture landing at Vladivostok to support the Czecho-Slovaks.

CANADIAN JOURNALISTS VISIT FRANCE

DOUGHBOY FULLY EQUIPPED

In this Canadian official photograph is shown a group of Canadian journalists on board a Canadian train car in France, riding through one of the forests on the western front.

Back view of the heavy pack containing helmet, rations, etc., of an American infantryman, carried while going over the top in France.

WOUNDED YANKEE SOLDIERS

American wounded are here seen arriving at a field hospital in France.

YANKEE AUTO TRUCKS ARRIVE IN ITALY

In this, one of the first pictures to arrive in this country of the actual landing of American troops in Italy, is seen a long trainload of automobile trucks belonging to the American forces.

FRENCH WOMEN STUDY AIRPLANES

Several French women airplane mechanics, attached to the British army in France, interested in the mechanism of a British machine. The women release male mechanics for duty as pilots.

A Forsaken Trade.

Automobile thieves have forsaken their trade of swiping joy wagons for more essential work—that of making prison shoes. Very few cars have been stolen lately. But it being an open industry, women have invaded it. At least one woman has. She didn't get very far, but she was busy while in the business. She stole a car, run down a loan in the next street, hopped out of the machine, dragged her victim to the sidewalk, sent in an ambulance call and then, concluding that she didn't really care for the car, walked away and left it.—New York Sun.

Good for Eugenics.

"The war has put an end to match-making."
"Has it really? I notice there are as many marriages as ever."
"Of course, but the young people arrange matters for themselves. It's bound to be that way nowadays when a 'buck' private in khaki stands a better chance to win the village belle than a banker's son, who couldn't pass the physical examination to enter the army."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

He Should Worry.

A philosophic storekeeper makes it a practice every once in a while to walk back and forth in front of his store in order to observe the facial expressions of the people coming out, and to listen to their remarks. This habit has often given him things to think about. He has seen men emerging with faces like animated cartoons of prize fighters, and women who looked as if they had lost their last chance of marrying. He has overheard such uncomplimentary saying as this: "He can go to Hades with his old store."
"I should worry," he says; "and you can bet that I do. Furthermore, I aim to find out why my customers leave the store in such conditions of mind."

Making Discouraged Huns Laugh.

"We must cheer up our discouraged people some way," said the kaiser.
"But, most excellent one, they have already heard the news that our picked forces have been routed and are running away."
"Tell them something. Tell them that we are running away as rapidly as possible in order to wear out the enemy. We shall soon tire them out."
"That is an excellent idea, your majesty. Gloomy and depressed as our people are, that excuse will undoubtedly give them a big laugh."

EAST INDIANS WHO HELP THE ALLIES

The East Indians here seen filling a pot with water from a barrel on a cart are some of the British subjects from the far East who are in France fighting and working for the cause of freedom.