Sometime ago the county commissioners inaugurated the plan of meeting on Monday of each week for the consideration of general county affairs and the allowance of claims. The plan is found to work well, as the business is cleaned up more promptly and those who have claims against the county do not need to wait so long for their warrants. Generally all the business of the preceding week can be transacted in one day. Formerly the commissioners met about once a month.

The board of health held another meeting Friday afternoon and officially lifted the lid from all public gatherings and picture shows, although City Physician Dent expressed himself as doubtful whether such was justifiable in view of the influenza conditions. PIONEER CITIZEN PASSES AWAY LAST THURSDAY.

Fred Ginapp, for nearly fifty years a resident of Gaslin precinct passed away last Thursday. Death was due to dropsy, with which he had been troubled for a number of months. The funeral was held yesterday and interment made in the Ft. McPherson national cemetery.

Mr. Ginapp was one of those men who helped to blaze the way for the settlers of the western plains and guard them against deprivations of Indians, for he was a member of H company, Fifth Cavalry, a military unit that probably did more Indian campaigning than any other body of soldiers. Associated with Mr. Ginapp in these campaigns were P. H. McEvoy, W. C. Ritter, Luke Healy and one or two others who are North Platte residents. In recognition of their services in these campaigns these men were but recently presented with medals and were also granted pensions.

Mr. Ginapp was honorably discharged from service in 1867 and shortly thereafter homesteaded land in Gaslin precinct upon which he had continuously resided.

Ever loyal to his country, ever true to his friends, a good citizen and an industrious man, the passing away of Fred Ginapp is regretted by everyone who knew him.
