The RIVER When the Colorado Burst Its Banks and

EDNAH AIKEN

Flooded the Imperial Valley of California

(Copyright, Bobbs-Merrill Company)

RICKARD'S VIEWS DO NOT COINCIDE WITH THOSE OF HAR-DIN. AND THE INEVITABLE COMES TO PASS.

Synopsis.-K. C. Rickard, an engineer of the Overland Pacific railroad, is called to the office of President Marshall in Tuscon, Ariz. While waiting Rickard reads a report on the ravages of the Colorado river, despite the efforts of Thomas Hardin, head of the Desert Reclamation company. Hardin had been a student under Rickard in an eastern college and had married Gerty Holmes, with whom Rickard had funcied be was in love. Marshall tells Rickard the Overland Pacific must step in to save the Imperial valley and wishes to send Rickard to take charge. Rickard declines because he foresees embarrassment in supplanting Hardin, but is won over. Rickard goes to Calexico and, on the way, learns much about Hardin and his work. Rickard meets Mr. and Mrs. Hardin and Innes Hardin, the former's half sister. At the company offices he finds the engineers loyal to Hardin and hostile to him.

on the angry face. Was this genuine,

"MacLean's coming down tonight,"

"I won't be missed." Hardin's mouth was bitter. 'Estrada, if I had my stock to MacLean and quit. What's in all this for me? Does anyone doubt my reason for staying? It would be like leaving a sinking ship, like deserting the passengers and crew one

"No one doubts you-" began Es-ugly onth. The Mexican stood watching his stumbling anger. "Poor Har-

In the office Rickard was speaking me, not at all agreeable!" His tone

MacLean stared, then said that he Rickard left the office in time to

"A d-d shame!" This from

On the other side of the door Rickard deliberated. The hotel and its curious loungers, or his new office, where behind him. His exit released a chothought he was not likely to!

rus of indignant voices.

"An outrage!"

"Hardin's luck !"

Wooster.

face, "With Babcock."

din!"

players.

"Six-fifteen."

before the men."

CHAPTER V-Continued.

The door opened and Rickard came or did not Hardin know of the years would introduce the new general man- of Mexico, where Marshall had "found" ager to the dismissed one? The him? But he would not try again to feldt doubled over the checkerboard, after all, for the new manager to take vey." pretending not to see them. Confu- charge with his predecessor out of ston, embarrassment was on every the way. face. Nobody spoke. Hardin was coming closer.

"Hello, Hardin." "Hello, Rickard."

It appeared friendly enough to the surprised office. Both men were glad that it was over.

"Nice offices," remarked Hardin, his legs outspread, his hands in his pock-

"Ogilvie is satisfied with them." The men rather overdid the laugh. "Finding the dust pretty tough?" inquired Hardin.

"I spent a month in San Francisco tast summer!" was the rejoinder. "This is a haven, though, from the street. Thought I'd loaf for today." Was Hardin game to do the right thing, introduce him as the new chief to his subordinates? Nothing, it developed, was further from his intention. Hardin, his legs outstretched. kept before his face the bland, impenetrable smile of the oriental. It was clearly not Rickard's move. The checker players fidgeted. Rickard's atill smiled.

The outer door opened.

The newcomer, evidently a favorite, walked into a noisy welcome, the "boys" embarrassment overdoing it. He was of middle height, slender-a Mexican with Castillan ancestry written in his high-bred features, his grace and his straight, dark hair."

"Good morning, Estrada," said Herdin with the same meaningless smile. "Good morning, gentlemen." The Mexican's greeting paused at Rickard.

"Mr. Estrada, Mr. Rickard." Everyone in the office saw Hardin snub his other opportunity. He had betrayed to everyone his deep hurt, his raw wound. When he had stepped down, under cover of a resignation, he had saved his face by telling everyone that a rupture with Maitland, one of the directors of the reorganized company, had made it impossible for them to serve together, and that Maitland's wealth and im- Ogilvie was making a great show of portance to the company demanded his own sacrifice. Two months before Rickard's appearance Maitland had been discovered dead in his bath in a Los Angeles hotel. Though no one had been witless enough to speak of their hope to Hardin, he knew that all his force was daily expecting his reinstatement. Rickard's entrance was another stab to their chief.

"The son of the general?" The new manager held out his hand. "General Estrada, friend of Mexican liberty. founder of steamship companies and father of the Imperial valley?"

"That makes me a brother of the valley"-Estrada's smile was sensitive and sweet. Estrada looked at Hardin, hesitated, then passed on to the checker players and addressed MacLean: "I saw your father in Los Angeles.

He has been chosen to fill the vacancy made by Maitland's death." MacLean's eyes wavered toward Hardin, whose nonchalance had not faltered. Had he not heard, or did he know, already?

Because it was so kindly done, Hardin showed his first resentment. "It will not be possible for me to be there. I'm going to Los Angeles in the morning. He turned and left the office, Estrada following him.

"Oh, Mr. Hardin, you mustn't take it that way," he expostulated, concern in little lunch and then look over some each sensitive feature.

"Pil take orders from him, but he gave me none," growled Hardin, "It's not what you think. I'm not sore. But I don't like him. He's a fancy dude. He's not the man for this job."

"Then you knew him before?" It was a surprise to Estrada. "At college. He was my-er-inelessroom. A theory slinger,"

"I'd like to have a meeting, a conference, tomorrow morning." Rickard was speaking. "Mr. Hardin, will you Hardin Turned Away With an Ugly set the hour at your convenience?" Oath. occupation. He had not seen Estrada.

He was making a sudden dive for his hotel when the gentle voice of the Mexican hailed him. "Will you come to my car? It's on the siding right here. We can have a maps together. I have some pictures of the river and the gate. They may be new to you."

Rickard spent the afternoon in the car. The twin towns did not seem so hostile. He thought he night like the Mexican.

mantle. He was the superintendent structor. Marshall found him in the of the road which the Overland Pa- nies. cific was building between the twin towns and the Crossing; a director of the Desert Reclamation company, and the head of a small subsidiary company which had been created to protect rights and keep harmonious relation with the sister country. Rickard found him full of meat, and heard, for the first time consecutively, the story of the rakish river. Particularly interesting to him was the relation of Hardin to the company.

"He has the bad luck, that man!" exclaimed Estrada's soft, musical Hardin, that a wooden headgate on silt voice. "Everything is in his hands, capital is promised, and he goes to New York to have the papers drawn first day be visited the river with you up. The day he gets there the Maine is destroyed. Of course capital is shy. He's had the devil's own luck with men: Gifford, honest but mulish; Crossing on rock foundation. Mr. Mar-Sather, mulish and not honest-oh, shall does not expect to finish that in there's a string of them. Once he Estrada's thoughtful glance rested went to Hermosillo to get an option on my father's lands. They were already covered by an option held by some in. Almost simultaneously the outer Rickard had served on the road; of men in Scotland. Another man would my opinion." pass. Not Hardin, He went to Scotland, thought he'd interest those men thought flashed from MacLean to Si- persuade Hardin to give up his trip with his maps and papers. He owned tent, to the telegraph operator. Bode- to Los Angeles, 'It might be better, all the data then. He'd made the sur-

Estrada repeated the story Brandon and Marshall had told, with little discrepancy. A friendly refrain followed planned?" he threw out, still watching Hardin's the narrative. "He has the bad luck, that man!"

ed Rickard, smiling at his own poor the sense of a goat I'd sell out, sell joke.

"It was just fhat. A case of Hardin luck again. He stopped off in London to interest some capital there; following up a lead developed on the steamer. He was never a man to neglect a time. had brought on board. God! I'd like chance. Nothing came of it, though, to go! But how can I? I've got hold and when he reached Glasgow he of the tail of the bear and I can't let found his man had died two days before-or been killed, I've forgotten which. Three times Hardin's crossed trada. Hardin turned away, with an the ocean trying to corner the opportunity he thought he had found. It isn't laziness, is his trouble. It's just infernal luck."

"Or over-astuteness, or procrastinato MacLean, whom he had drawn to tion," criticized his listener to himself. one side, out of earshot of the checker He knew now what it was that had so changed Hardin. A man cannot "I want you to do something for travel, even though he be hounding down a quick scent, without meeting implied that the boy was not given strong influences. He had been thrown slience was interrogative. Hardin the chance to beg off. "What time with hard men, strong men. It was does the train pull out in the morn- an inevitable chiseling, not a miracle.

"I want to hear more of this some day. But this map. I don't under-"I'll have a letter for you at the stand what you told me of this byhotel at six. Be on time. I want to pass, Mr. Estrada.

catch Hardin before he leaves for Los | Their heads were still bending over Angeles. If he's really going. I'll give Estrada's rough work bench when the him today to think it over. But he Japanese cook announced that dinner can't disregard an order as he dld my was waiting in the adjoining car. invitation. I didn't want to rub it in MacLean and Bodefeldt and several young engineers joined them.

It had been outwardly a wasted day. Rickard had lounged, socially and physically. But before he turned in e Hardin shutting the outer gate that night he had learned the names and dispositions of his force, and some of their prejudices. Nothing, he summed up, could be guessed from the gentleness of the Mexican's manner; Wooster's antagonism was open and snappish. Silent was to be watched, and Hardin had already shown his hand.

The river, as he thought of it, appeared the least formidable of his opponents. He was imaging it as a highspirited horse, maddened by the fumbling of its would-be captors. His task it was to lasso the proud stallion, lead it in bridled to the sterile land. No wonder Hardin was sore; his noose had slipped off one time too many! Hardin's luck!

CHAPTER VI.

Red Tape.

At ten o'clock the next morning Hardin, entering the office, again the general manager's, found there before him George MacLean, the new director, and Percy, Babcock, the treasurer, who had been put in by the Overland Pacific when the old company was reorganized. They had just come in from Los Angeles, the trip made in MacLean's private car, to attend a director's meet-

Rickard entered a few minutes later, Estrada behind him. Ogilvie followed Rickard to his desk.

"Well?" inquired the new manager. Ogilvie explained lengthfly that he had the minutes of the last meeting. "Leave them here." Rickard waved him toward Estrada, who held out his hand for the papers. Reluctantly the accountant relinquished the papers. His retrepting coattails looked ludicrously whipped but no one laughed. Hardin's scowl deepened.

"Showing his power," he thought. 'He's going to call for a new pack." Estrada pushed the minutes through with but a few unimportant interruptions. He was sitting at the same desk with Rickard. Hardin, sensitive and sullen, thought he saw the meeting managed between them.

Several times he attempted to bring the tangled affairs of the water com-Estrada was earning his father's punies before the directors. Rickard would not discuss the water compa-"Pergusa he's not posted! He's beran Hardin's stormy thoughts.

Babcock and MacLean his wrongs, the vote. The appropriation was carried. injustice that had been done him. Mar- Hardin's face was swollen with rage. shall had let that fellow Maitland convince him that the gate was not pracgate would be in place now; all this time and money saved. And the Mait- February? land dam, built instead! Where was it? Where was the money, the time, put in that little toy? Sickening! His face purpled over the memory. Why was he allowed to begin again with the gate? "Answer me that. Why are no chances." He looked at Mac- butwas I allowed to begin again? It's all Lean. "The machinery's done. It's no child's play, that's what it is. And when I am in it again up to my neck he pulls me off!"

This was the real Hardin, the uncouth, overaged Lawrence student! Rickard had been expecting it to wear

"I think," interjected Rickard, "that we all agree with Mr. Marshall, Mr. foundation could never be more than a makeshift. I understood that the he had the idea to put the ultimate gate, the gate which would control the water supply of the valley, up at the time to be of first use. He hopes the wooden gate will solve the immediate problem. It was a case of any port in a storm. He has asked me to report loa. He'll send us all the labor we

"Why doesn't he give me a chance to go ahead then?" growled the deposed manager. "Instead of letting the intake widen until it will be an impossibility to confine the river there at all?"

"So you do think that it will be an impossibility to complete the gate as Hardin had run too fast. "I didn't mean that," he stammered. "I mean "And the Scotched option?" remind- it will be difficult if we are delayed much longer."

"Have you the force to re-begin work at once?" demanded Rickard. "I had it," evaded Hardin. "I had everything ready to go on-men, material - when we stopped the last

"Answer my question, please." "I should have to assemble them again," admitted Hardin sulkily.

Rickard consulted his notebook. "I think we've covered everything. Now I want to propose the laying of a spur track from Hamlin's Junction to the Heading." His manner cleared the stage of supernumeraries; this was the climax. Hardin looked ready to spring.

"And in connection with that the development of a quarry in the granite ard, not looking at Hardin.

Instantly Hardin was on his feet. His fist thundered on the table. "I tional contract law," suggested Macshall oppose that," he flared. "It is ab- Lean. solutely unnecessary. We can't afford it. Do you know what that will cost, gentlemen?"

oppropriation this morning for that will help us." amount. It is, in my opinion, abso-Mr. Hardin!"

Hardin glared at the other men for upport; he found MacLean's face a blank wall; Estrada looked uncomears at the sound of the desired appropriation; his head on one side, he ooked like an inquisitive terrier.

Hardin spread out his hands in helpess desperation. "You'll ruin us," he ald. "It's your money, the O. P.'s, but you're lending it, not giving it to is. You are going to swamp the Desert Reclamation company. We can't dred thousand dollars! Why, he could mony. have stopped the river at any time if e had had that sum; once a paitry frame looked at Rickard inquiringly. housand would have saved them- "I interests at stake are too vital-" n at the eleventh hour, what can you up in stenography. now? Did you promise safety to thouands of families if they made their omes in this valley? Are you responsible? Did you get up this company, in- men." luce your friends to put their money in it, promise to see them through? What do you know of the interests at stake? You want to put one hundred you know what that means to my ompany? It means ruin-" Estrada utled him down in his seat.

if you rush my gate through." yould stand for no contingencies. The cover."

Rickard explained to the directors the necessity in his opinion of the spurtrack and the quarry. Rock in great quantities would be needed; cars must he importance of clenching the issue. "If it's not won this time, it's a lost cause," he maintained., "If it cuts a deeper gorge, the Imperial valley is a chimera; so is Laguna dam."

The other men were drawn into the din's conservation. MacLean was judicial. Estrada upheld Rickard. The tial to success. Hardin could see the ginning to see what he's up against," coot and impersonal, adding to his to a ghost of tunefulness. "And it's-He was on his feet the next minute the stronger side. Hardin, on his feet not going to happen. It is terribly with a motion to complete the Hardin again, was sputtering helplessly at final! It's happened, often. Now, I headgate. Violently he declaimed to Babcock, when Rickard called for a wait for that—veil. When it fails, I Rickard then called for a report on about this river businesse" the clam-shell dredge being rushed at ticable; had it not been for him the Yuma. Where was the machinery? Was it not to have been finished in

"Why not get the machinery here? kept coming. I had it while you were What's the use of taking chances?" demanded Rickard.

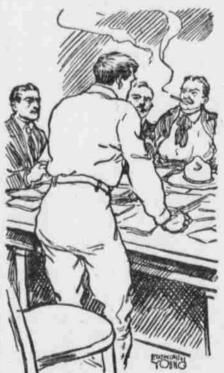

Hardin felt the personal implication. He was on his feet in a second. "There use getting it here until we're ready."

"There are always chances," Interrupted his opponent coolly, ."We are going to take none. I want Mr. Hardin, gentlemen, appointed a committee The new manner was just a veneer, of one to see that the machinery is delivered at once, and the dredge rushed."

The working force was informally discussed. Hardin said they could depend on hobo labor. Rickard agreed tory." that they would find such help, but it would not do to rely on it. The big sewer system of New Orleans was about completed; he had planned to write there, stating the need. And there was a man in Zacatecas, named Porter-

"Frank Porter?" sneered Hardin, "that-murderer?"

"His brother," Rickard answered pleasantly. "Jim furnishes the men for the big mines in Sonora and Sina-

Instantly Hardin Was on His Feet.

want, the best for our purpose. When hills back of Hamlin's," continued Rick- it gets red-hot, there's no one like a peon or an Indian. "You'll be infringing on the interna-

"No. The camp is on the Mexican side," laughed Casey. "I'd thought of that. We'll have them shipped to the "One hundred thousand dollars!" nearest Mexican point, and then Rickard interrupted him. "I want an brought to the border. Mr. Estrada

The meeting had already adjourned. lutely necessary if we are to save the They were standing around the flatvalley. We cannot afford not to do it, top desk. Estrada invited them all to lunch with him, in the car on the siding. MacLean said that he had to get back to Los Angeles. Mr. Babcock was going to take him out to Grant's fortable. Babcock had pricked up his Heading in the machine. He had never been there. They had breakfasted late. He looked very much the colonel to Rickard, his full chest and stiff carriage made more military by his trim uniform of khaki-colored cloth. "May I speak to you about your boy.

Mr. MacLean?"

Hardin caught a slight that was not intended. He pushed past the group throw funds away like that." One hun- at the door without civility or cere-The steady grave eyes of the big

"He wants to stay out another year didn't ask the O. P. to come in and I hope you will let him. It's not disinruin us, but to stop the river; not to terested. I shall have to take a stenogthrow money away in hog-wild fash- rapher to the Heading this summer. lon." He was stammering inarticulate- There is a girl here; I couldn't take ly. "There's no need of a spur-track her, and then, too, I'm old-fashioned; I don't like women in offices. My posi-"If," Rickard nodded. "Granted. If tion promises to be a peculiar one. I'd we can rush it through. But suppose like to have your son to rely on for it falls? Marshall said the railroad emergencies a stenographer could not MacLean's grave features relaxed as "Interests!" cried Tom Hardin, he looked down on the engineer, who What do you know of the interest at was no small man himself, and sugstake? You or your railroad? Coming gested that his son was not very well

"That's the least of it." "I hope that he will make a good stenographer! Good morning, gentle-

At table, neither Estrada nor his guest uncovered their active thought which revolved around Hardin and his hurt. Instead, Rickard had questions thousand dollars into a frill. God, do to ask his host on river history. As they talked, it came to him that something was amiss-Estrada was accurate; he had all his facts. Was it enthusiasm, sympathy, he lacked? Presently he challenged him with it.

Estrada's eyes dreamed out of the window, followed the gorge of the New be rushed in to the break. He urged river, as though out there, somewhere. he answer hovered.

"Do you mean, do you doubt it?" exciaimed Rickard, watching the melancholy in the beautiful eyes, Estrada shook his head, but without decision. "Nothing you'd not laugh at argument. Babcock leaned toward Har- I can laugh at it myself, sometimes." Rickard waited, not sure that any thing more was coming. The Mexispur-track, in his opinion, was essen- can's dark eyes were troubled; a puzzle brooded in them. "It's a purely negameeting managed between the new- tive sense that I've had, since I was a comer and the Mexican, and his anger child. Something fails between me repotently raged. His temper made and a plan. If I said it was a veil, it bim incoherent. He could see Rickard, would be something!" His voice fell literally burning stone.

points, and MacLean slowly won to nothing. A blank-I know then it's know what it means,'

"And you have had that-sense

Estrada turned his pensive gaze on the American. "Yes, often. I thought, after father's death, that that was what it meant. But it came again. It all talking, just now. I don't speak of this. It sounds chicken-hearted. And I'm in this with all my soul-my father-I couldn't do it any other way.

"You think we are going to fail?" "I can't see it finished," was Estrada's mournful answer. He turned again to stare out of the window.

"Who are the river men in the valley?" demanded the newcomer. "I want to meet them, to talk to them."

"Cor'nel, he's an Indian. He's worth talking to. He knows its nistory, its legends. Perhaps some of it is his-

"Where's he to be found?" "You'll run across him! Whenever anything's up, he is on mand. He senses it. And then there's Matt Hamlin."

"I'll see him, of course. Has he been up the river?" "No, but I'll tell you two who have, Maldonado, a half-breed, who lives some twenty miles down the river from Hamlin's. He knows the Gila as though he were pure Indian. The Gila's tricky! Maldonado's grandfather was a trapper, his great-grandfather, they say, a priest. The women were all Indian. He's smart. Smart and bad."

Estrada's Japanese servant came back into the car to offer tea, freshly

"That's what I want, smart river men, not tea!" laughed Rickard. "I want river history."

"There's another man you ought to meet. He was with the second Powell expedition. He's written the best book on the river. He knows it, if any man does. You wanted these maps." Bs-trada was gathering them together. "Thank you. And you can just strangle that foreboding of yours, Mr. Estrada. For I tell you, we're going to govern that river!"

Estrada's pensive smile followed the dancing step of the engineer until it carried him out of sight. Perhaps? Because he was the son of his father, he must work as hard as if conviction went with him, as if success awaited at the other end of the long road. But it was not going to be. He would never see that river shackled-

CHAPTER VII.

A Garden in a Desert.

His dwelling leaped into sight as Hardin turned the corner of the street, There was but one street running through the twin towns, flanked by the ditches of running water. The rest were ditches of running water edged by footpaths. Scowling, he passed under the overhanging bird cages of the Desert hotel without a greeting for the loungers, whose chairs were drawn up gainst the shade of the bric The momentum slackened as Hardin neared the place he called his home. An inner tenderness diluted the sneer that disfigured his face. He could see Innes as she moved around in the little fenced-in strip that surrounded her desert tent. She insisted on calling it a garden, in spite of his raillery. "Gerty's in bed, I suppose," thought Tom. He had a sudden vivid picture of her accusing martyrdom. His mouth hardened again. Innes, stooping over a rose, passed out of his vision.

It came to Hardin suddenly that a man has made a circle of failure when he dreads going to his office and shrinks from the reproaches at home. "A 'has-been' at forty!" he mused.

Where were all his ships drifting? Innes, straightening, waved a gay hand.

"She's raising a goodly crop of barrels." His thought mocked and caressed her. Her garden devotion was a tender joke with him. He loved the Hardin trait in her, the persistence which will not be daunted. An occupation with a Hardin was a dedication. He would not acknowledge the Innes blood in her. Like that fancy mother of hers? Innes was a Hardin through and through!

"It's in the blood," ran his thought. "She can't help it. All the Hardins work that way. The Hardins always make fools of themselves!"

Innes, lifting her eyes from a crippled rose, saw that the black devils were consuming him again. "Will you look at this wreck!" she Innes Hardin feels a bitter resentment against Rickard because of his supplanting her brother, whom she loves devotedly. Gerty's emotions are of a different character, but she carefully conceals them. Storms hover over the Hardin household. Watch for the next installment.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Unskilled Labor.

A man never realizes what the term 'unskilled labor" can mean until he boldly volunteers to repair the water faucets and take down the screen doors .- Washington Star.

Oldest Known Element.

Sulphur is one of the oldest known elements; the ancient Assyrian aichemists regarded it as the principle of combustion and termed it "brimstone,"