REFUGEES' HOT WATER LINE IN SIBERIA

The Trans-Siberian railroad has been carrying refugees from the bolsheviki for the last few months. Scenes like this are common all along the line. The Russian people are large tea drinkers, and at the depots they get off wherever possible to get hot water for their tea.

SINKING OF THE LUSITANIA IS COMMEMORATED

From the deck of the German UC-97, officially credited with the sinking of nine allied vessels, the outrage committed against the Lusitania on May 7, 1915, was commemorated. The undersen pirate, one of the number surrendered to the United States, sailed into the narrows of New York harbor, and from her deck American sailors and Victory loan campaigners threw a wreath into the sea on the fourth anniversary of the sinking of the Lusitania.

LUCKY LITTLE YEOMAN

Miss Betty Fisher, yeoman (F), second class, in the navy, is now a millionaire twice over. She has been informed that her uncle, an Oklahoma oil producer, has left her his whole fortune, which consists of properties worth over $2,000,000. The very pretty yeoman intends to stay in the navy until placed on inactive duty. She has already had a year's service. Two years ago she "roughed it" in Oklahoma with her uncle, John P. McMahon, a bachelor who ran away from home soon after his parents brought him from Ireland. As a result of that visit while he was staking out a new claim, Miss Fisher is today his sole heir. Her home is in New York city.

Made Sawdust Valuable.

Not many years ago the sawdust that accumulated each spring about the local mills was a nuisance to the mill-owners. It was in the way. Some of it was dumped into the streams and fish were exterminated, and some was given away to anyone who would make use of it. And about the only use that could be made of the sawdust was that of packing for ice in the ice-houses. The expansion of dairy farming called for more ice, and more ice called for more sawdust. The demand notified the mill-owners that the by-product of their mills, which they had been giving away and throwing away, had a commercial value. Sawdust is now sold by the load.

Soft Pedal.

Nan—I cried like a baby during the play.
Dan—I don't believe it. You would have been put out if you had.—Judge.

ERECTED BY HUNS IN 1871

Sergt. Charles E. Walker of the army of occupation reading the inscription on a monument that was built in 1871, near Denkmal, Germany. It read: "Kaiser oak planted by the Rengsdorf society, March 22, 1871, in remembrance of the great deeds of the German army under the leadership of his majesty, Kaiser and King William I, in the year 1870-71." The oak that was planted has withered and fallen away.

Guardian of the Royal Mint.

An important guardian of the royal mint in London, where golden pounds and silver coins are made, is a big, brown-coated terrier. He was taken to the mint as a puppy, and was well trained to his work. His duties do not begin until evening. Then he turns out with the guard and remains on patrol throughout the night. He goes everywhere—into the big places where the officer on duty accompanies him; into the little places capable of hiding someone, where a policeman could not enter. He knows his time and his beats, and after a certain hour he will not permit the presence of anyone in the mint who is not in policeman's uniform.

Lodge Members.

They were discussing the recent rise of the price of light and gas in Pasadena and its subsequent reduction. "Cost of these necessities really is far too high," remarked Mayor Woodman. "It reminds me of two men I recently overheard in conversation. One said: "Do you know anything about light?" "Sure I do." "What, for instance?" "That it travels 182,000 miles a second." "Ab," cried the first, "I see you've been studying your meter, too!"—Los Angeles Times.

ODD AIRPLANE ACCIDENT AT ROCKAWAY

One of the little hydroplanes at the naval flying station at Far Rockaway went into a tail spin and dived straight into the hydrogen tank shown in this photograph. The machine is seen resting inside the frame of the tank. The aviators killed were Ensign Adams and C. P. O. Carey.

GROUP OF ITALIAN REFUGEES

Hundreds of thousands of people in Europe were refugees at some time or other during the war, like the little Italian family shown in this Red Cross official photograph, that fled in front of the Austrians. The men of this household were in the army. The women and children lived on nothing but yellow corn for days while they tramped to safety. It is among people like these that tuberculosis has increased terribly in the last four years.
