

PICTURE THAT WOULD LIVE

Study for a Painter Suggested in Incident in the Early Life of Daniel Webster.

When Daniel Webster was eight years old he saw in a country shop a cotton handkerchief with something printed on both sides of it. He gave his whole stock of hoarded pennies to secure it and absorbed its contents that night with his keen dark eyes, on his father's kitchen floor, by the light of the roaring chimney fire. What painter will be the first to make that scene perpetual in our country's history and art? It was the Constitution of the United States, just then in the dawn of its beneficent power under the lead of President Washington, that the New Hampshire lad was then stamping on his memory. He told the story himself in 1850, and archly said: "I have known more or less of that document ever since." . . . Forty years from that winter came the great Hayne debate. But I would travel farther to see a master's picture of the lad, reading the Constitution in the rude home on the edge of the northern wilderness, than to see Healey's great painting of the orator in the senatorial struggle against the theory and passions of secession; as I would go farther to see a picture of the springs of the Amazon, far up under the cold white splinters of the Andes, than the most adequate representation of the imperial river's tropical course.—Thomas Starr King.

GAVE IDEA TO INVENTORS

Timothy Alden's Typesetting Machine First of the Kind to Be Placed on the Market.

Timothy Alden was born in Barnstable, Mass., 96 years ago. He was the first man to invent a typesetting machine. In his boyhood Timothy was apprenticed to a printer. He was a born inventor, and almost from his first day in the printing office he began to think of plans for improving the various processes connected with the typographical art. He invented several machines connected with printing before he turned his attention to the mechanical setting of type. After several years of study he produced his first model of a typesetting machine in 1840. This machine consisted of a horizontal rotating wheel with type cells on its circumference making receivers rotate with it to pick out the type at the proper places. This appliance was ingenious, but it effected no improvement over hand composition. Timothy Alden died in Boston in 1858, and his brother, Henry, later made several improvements in the machine. Timothy Alden's machine had the merit of setting others to thinking about the same problem, with the result that hand composition is rapidly becoming a thing of the past.

All About Eggs.

In a hen's egg only one-fifth of the substance is nutritious. One-ninth is refuse, and the greater portion, about two-thirds, is water. Judged by the amount of nutriment, a goose's egg is the most valuable; next in order are duck's, guinea fowl's, hen's, turkey's. Eggs contain a large quantity of sulphur, which is purifying to the blood and good for the complexion. To get the best egg you must feed your fowl on grain. And to cook it in the most digestible way you must not boil the water. Heat the water to 180 degrees and leave the egg in it for ten minutes. You will then digest every morsel. But if you boil it for three minutes no less than one-twelfth of it will fall to be digested.—Short Stories.

LITTLE KNOWN OF ST. MARK

Facts as to History of Evangelist Have Been Lost in the Passage of Years.

St. Mark, the evangelist, is believed to have been born of Jewish parents, deriving their origin from the tribe of Levi. He is also thought to have been "sister's son" to the apostle St. Peter, though some have confounded him with John, surnamed Mark, "sister's son" to St. Barnabas. He was probably converted by St. Peter, and was his constant attendant in his travels. He is traditionally said to have founded the church in Aquileia, and there to have written the gospel which bears his name. St. Mark suffered on April 25, though the certain year of his martyrdom is not precisely determined by the ancients. St. Mark's symbol is the lion, because he has set forth the royal dignity of Christ; or, according to other writers, on account of his beginning with the mission of St. John the Baptist, which is figured by the lion; or to a legend that was popularly believed in the middle ages, that the young of the lion was born dead, and after three days was awakened by the voice of its sire, symbolical of the resurrection.

No Novelty.

"How did you find the feller that runs the Busy Bee store?" inquired an acquaintance. "I just rummaged around till I unearthed him," replied a citizen of Sandy Mush, Ark., who had been shopping in Tumbinville. "Yes, but I heard that he was in mighty bad health?" "Mebby so. He may have been puny, but I didn't notice it. I found him asleep in the back room setting on a keg, and when I asked him if he had any axle grease he 'lowed he had, but wanted to know if I couldn't just as well come around later, when he'd prob'ly be standing up. Nope, I didn't see anything peculiar about him.—Kansas City Star.

Muscular Music.

"Thank goodness, now the Hun has shown himself in his true colors, our ears are no longer shattered with the noisy music of Richard Strauss." The speaker was Handel Booth, secretary of the Denver Philharmonic society. "I know a chap," he went on, "who said to his music teacher: 'Professor, I'd like to take up the study of Strauss with you. What will it cost?' 'Dot, mein freundt,' said the old professor, 'I'll depend on how many times der piano will have to be rebuilt.'"

Business Women Federating.

The first national convention of business women of America will be held in St. Louis, Mo., July 14. One of the important subjects to be discussed is housing for business women. This convention is a step toward the federation of business women. Behind the movement is a national committee of keen business and professional women, representing every section of the country, with headquarters at 600 Lexington avenue, New York city. Lena Madestin Phillips is the executive secretary of the federation.

No Escape.

"Good morning, Mrs. Jagsby. We are peace delegates." "Peace delegates?" "Yessum. We were sent by Mr. Jagsby, who was unable to get home last night. He wants us to arrange the armistice terms and settle on the size of the indemnity he owes you." "Umph! You tell Mr. Jagsby if he don't show up here in the next hour I'll come and get him. He's not in Holland."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

DAWN
By JACK LAWTON

(Copyright, 1915, Western Newspaper Union) Jerome Barris in the hour of his great success was but a disillusioned, disappointed man. Still young, and having won the golden key to favor, he drew back wearily before those doors it might open. During his years of struggle and need none of these friends, who now so eagerly strove to share his triumph, had made an effort to stretch forth a helping hand. Even the girl whom he had so deeply loved and who had professed to return his love had grown weary waiting and had heartlessly flitted him for an acknowledged man of the business world.

Now that the dream of Jerome Barris was realized he smiled cynically at this same woman's proffered notes of reconciliation—his former love had become a widow, but her charm for him had vanished before her insincerity, and all this superficial adulation now wearied him. He longed to get away from it, to get back to a certain spot which had often been his refuge. To Barris this small place, with the sea stretching out before, was home, his one sure haven.

It was here that his great picture was born—the picture which had won for him fame and fortune. Years ago, when his heart was sore with its disappointment, he had gone, after reading the announcement of the one girl's marriage, to the seclusion of this little house, there to shut out from curious eyes his deep hurt. And when at sundown he sat upon the tiny porch a boat had come drifting down a golden beam toward him. And in the boat sat a very young girl. Unbound, her golden hair rippled over her shoulders, and her up-raised face was glorified in the light. Barris called his great picture "Maidenhood."

Impulsively he had called her as she drifted by, and had run down to draw her boat in to the shore. The girl, who was perhaps fourteen or fifteen years of age, acceded readily to his request that she pose thus again for a picture. "I'll make the arrangement with your people," Barris suggested.

"I have no people," the girl told him, and as she went on with the strange story of her own life he knew what had brought the shadow to her young eyes. She had been washed to the shore in a boat tossed upon a stormy sea before she was old enough to remember anything about it. A man and woman found drowned later were thought to have been her parents, but she had never known. A fisherman finding the child carried her to his wife who had befriended her, until as the girl grew and the wife became an invalid the charge was transferred.

They called her "Dawn," the girl told him blushing, because it had been at dawn that the fisherman found her. And as days passed and Dawn came to pose for the artist he learned more and more of the hard incongruity of a young life which longed for great things and must be satisfied with common duties. Dawn's heart was full of music and her mind yearned for knowledge.

When upon his return later from the city Barris learned from his old housekeeper that Dawn's invalid charge had died he sent at once for the girl and bade her make her home in his house on the shore, arranging passage for her to and from a school in the adjoining village and finding her a music teacher there. Then in the absorbing occupation of his city studio the artist forgot about the little girl, who never ceased to think of him with reverent adoration.

Barris, long absent from the house by the sea, sought it out again after one of his trips abroad and learned from the old housekeeper that his protegee had secured a position as teacher in a near-by village and left word that he would hear from her later.

The artist smiled and frowned. "She should have allowed me to complete her education," he said. Then his pleased eyes fell upon the inviting furnishing of his beloved old room.

"You keep the place up well," he commended his housekeeper. "That's Dawn," the woman replied; "she comes out here and sees that things is all new an' convenient. 'We must keep it home—for him,' she says."

After that came to the artist regularly small checks in the name of the village bank, with notes in a girlish hand.

"Of course I can never repay what you have done for me," wrote Dawn, "this is just to assure myself that I would if I could."

And at length, wearied by labor and surfeited with flattering attentions, came to Barris a longing wish for the restful house by the shore. And when he reached it at sundown, sailing again across the golden water toward him, came the girl who had made his great picture. Standing on the sands at her side he told her so.

"You speak of repaying your debt to me," said Barris. "My dear girl! do you realize that it is I who am indebted to you—for my success, for the very comfort of home, for a belief in truth and goodness which had almost forsaken me? Why, you have given to me every good gift—save happiness."

"And I wish I might give you that," said Dawn. "I hope—I believe—that you will," Barris answered softly, and they looked into each other's eyes.

THE CHIROPRACTORS

When the back is sore and tender to the touch, and even the effort to stand straight, let alone lift anything, causes nervous weakness, you have a condition of the spine that needs correction. At times the condition may develop sharp lumbago pains.

The cause is lack of alignment of the joints of the backbone in the small of the back. It may have become disordered by a heavy lift or by careless habits of sitting or standing. Along with the soreness the bowels are often affected.

The only correction of value is an adjustment by hand such as only the skilled chiropractor can give. When the nerve pressure is replaced by strength and health.
