Recruiting Officers in Town.

A naval recruiting party in charge of officer W. H. Helmsman, arrived yesterday and will remain this week with an office in the federal building. Boys between the ages of 17 and 18 and men between 18 and 35, who are full citizens of the United States and of sound mental and physical condition, good moral character and who are able to read and write the English language, can visit the recruiting party's headquarters in the federal building and see the chief petty officer in charge.

The term of enlistment is for four years, except in the cases of boys between the ages of 17 and 18, who must obtain their parents' or guardian's consent, and who will serve until the day before reaching their 21st birthday. Men over 18 years of age do not require consent of their parents but the navy department prefers that young men discuss the matter with their parents.

The minimum pay is $32.60 per month for apprentice seamen and landsmen, and men with trades and previous service men, may enlist at high ratings with base pay reaching as high as $99.00. The navy is the greatest school on earth and over 55 trades are employed.

Less Killed and Injured

Since the organization of the Safety Movement, under the railroad administration in the Central-Western Region, the number of accidents have decreased appreciably. During the three months of January, February and March, 1919, there were 90 less employees killed and 1115 less injured than in the three same months in 1918. Is there any wonder that the employees and the management are vitally interested in such a movement when the results are so satisfactory?

More Men Employed

The supply of labor in both car and locomotive departments in the Central-Western Region for the month of May was ample to meet all requirements. There was a total of 82,182 men employed in both departments during the month as compared with 77,538 for the month of May, 1918.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Blalock returned this morning from a visit to Colorado points.

Mrs. Ferguson left this morning for an extended visit in the eastern part of the state.

Tornado in Minnesota.

Evansville, Minn., June 23.—Forty-seven persons are known to be dead, 160 are injured and in emergency hospitals, and property valued at $6,000,000 is destroyed as a result of the tornado which swept through Forgas Falls late yesterday afternoon. Relief work is under way with plenty of doctors and nurses on hand. There is a possibility that the death list may reach 60 when the ruins of the Grand Hotel have been thoroughly searched, as it is known many bodies are still beneath the pile. The greatest loss of life took place at the Grand Hotel, a three-story building. Thirty-five persons are believed to have been killed when the building was smashed by the twister. More than 50 guests were in the building.

More Battleships Sunk.

The German warships which were not surrendered to the allies and which have been anchored off Kiel, Wilhelmshaven and other points, have been sunk by German sailors manning them, according to a report received at Weimar from a reliable authority.

According to the reports there were twelve German war vessels, besides destroyers, which were in German waters, not having been turned over to the entente under the armistice provisions.

Gasoline to Be Mined.

The latest estimates of the United States geological survey show that if gasoline continues to be used up at the present rate, all the petroleum fields now in use will be exhausted before 1950. Where, then, will the future supply of gasoline come from? Billions of dollars are involved in the question. The probable answer is that "mined" gasoline will be used.

Colorado, Utah and other Western and middle Western states contain extensive oil-bearing deposits of bituminous shale. Crude oil can be extracted from them and this can be distilled further to obtain gasoline.

It is estimated that enough gasoline could be produced in this way to equal many times the amount obtained from all present-day fields.

A Muddled Moujik.

Mr. Tower, former American ambassador to Russia, told this story of a typical moujik entering a railroad station and inquiring when a certain train would leave. He received the information and departed.

A little later, however, he was back again, asking the same question.

"Why," exclaimed the agent, "I told you that only a minute ago."

"You did truly," the moujik answered, "but it isn't myself that wants to know this time, it's my mate outside."—Boston Transcript.

Discouraging Art.

"Why do you spend your days and nights on these pictures?" asked the wife of the struggling artist. "You don't get enough for them to pay you for the paint you use."

"I know, my dear," he answers; "but think! Rembrandt and others painted pictures and sold them for trifles, and they are now the masterpieces of the world and bring millions of dollars! I am not painting for us. I am painting for our descendants."

"Humph!" is the discouraging reply. "You don't make enough for us to afford to raise any descendants."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Strategy.

"Making friends is all very well, but a man should be careful about the kind of friends he makes," remarked Mr. Gadsper.

"My sentiments exactly," said Mr. Dubwalte. "Whenever a newcomer moves into my neighborhood and looks as if he might want to borrow my garden tools three or four days a week I find out what his political views are and take the opposing side."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Master LaVerne Elliott returned Sunday from a week's visit with relatives at Trumble and Hastings.

Mrs. Louis Peterson will return this afternoon from a visit in Cheyenne.

WROTE OF LIFE AT HARVARD

Author Now Forgotten Conceded to Have Been the First to Depict Undergraduate Days.

Harvard graduates, the world over, have long believed that the earliest pictorial record of undergraduate life at the oldest college in the United States was made when F. G. Attwood drew his pictures of college life for the first volume of the Harvard Lampoon. The Lampoon was the forerunner of humorous journalism to America; Attwood became a famous humorist; and his "Manners & Customs of ye Harvard Students" was established as a classic. The discovery of a time-stained book in a New England farmhouse reveals an earlier draftsman, whose "College Scenes" antedate "Ye Harvard Students" by about a quarter of a century, but were soon generally forgotten. Of N. Hayward, the artist, no record remains but the bare fact that he was then in college. The discoverer, however, had a rare afternoon when he found the volume in a dusty chest, where it had been packed away with a lot of contemporary textbooks and an old Harvard diploma.—Christian Science Monitor.
