Estate Single Register Heater "The Furnace that Breathes"

A Simple, Economical and Healthful System of Warm Air Heating.

A Simple, Economical and Healthful System of Warm Air Heating.

The Estate Single Register Heater eliminates the long runs of warm air pipes, invariable used with the ordinary warm air furnace, and which occupys a large part of the basement, as well as increase installation cost: Only a single warm air register and two cold air intake registers are located in the floor.

The Estate Single Register Heater is called "the Furnace that Breathes" because its action is much like the lungs of the human body. Warm air is constantly dis-charged (exhaled) into the house while the cooler air is drawn back into the furnace (inhaled) through the two intake registers.

In the Estate Single Register Heater there is no possibility of friction in the circulating system. The cold air, being returned to the furnace through ducts which are apart from the main casings, cannot become heated until it arrives at the base of the heater. At that point the air is quickly heated, rises rapidly and is discharged into the house and will produce a more complete circulation of air within a given time than any other furance, which explain its tremendous heating power.
