Hershey News.

(From the Times.)

Ray Morgan leaves for Omaha tomorrow to bring back a couple of Buick cars for the Hershey Auto Co. We note the name of Louis Bechan among the list of overseas arrived at New York the latter part of last week.

The wheat yield varies from about twelve to thirty-one bushels. The best so far reported being the field of F. O. Johnson's which made nearly thirty-one bushels, testing 59 1/2.

Mrs. Eva Wisler, of Pendleton, Ore., arrived Monday for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Eyerly, and her brother, O. H. Eyerly.

Lieut. Wm. Flynn visited Hershey friends the first of the week. He is now with the regulars at Fort Sill, Okla., but was home on a short furlough. He will receive his discharge about the 5th of August.

The shipments of new hay have started from the local station, from eight to ten cars are now going out daily. Grain is also starting to move. G. M. Smith purchased the lot just west of the Loren Root property on Second street from Mrs. C. E. McClain last week and will soon start the erection of a nice bungalow residence.

Loren Root, former principal in the Hershey school, is now editing the Sedgwick Sun. He is putting out a nice little sheet, well filled with advertising. We welcome Mr. Root into the newspaper fraternity.

Artie McKean received a substantial offer to go to Douglas, Wyo., to play ball. He is not sure yet that he will accept. Louis Bestwick is playing with that team and they are making quite a record.

S. J. Koch marketed fifteen head of sows this morning which netted him the tidy sum of $1200. But this is not the whole story. These same sows raised him over one hundred pigs which he still has. This is one of the best hog deals we have yet heard of and plainly shows that there is money in raising hogs.

Claim Not Justified.

The Sutherland Courier claims that immediately following the attacks of the Courier and the Maxwell Telepost on North Platte's morality the North Platte city council passed ordinances prohibiting gambling and compelling hotels and lodging houses to keep registers, claiming that the attacks of the two papers were responsible for the passage of the ordinances. We are sorry to deprive these two papers of the credit they claim, but both the ordinances were authorized about two weeks before the Courier or Telepost had their little say, and further two-thirds of the men who compose the councilmanic body never saw or heard of the attacks and therefore could not possibly be influenced by them.

Clean Up Your Town, Bro. Dunn.

During the past week there have been several homes robbed in Sutherland of amounts ranging from cents to $20.00. It seems that all the thief or thieves want is money as they pass up watches, jewelry, etc., and take nothing but cash. On Friday night Mayor Jas. R. White's home was entered and about $21.00 taken. The same night the thieves visited the homes of Ed Hehnke, E. W. Briggs, John W. Cochran, C. L. Triplett, Ed Jolliffe and John Kammert and got various amounts. At this time no trace of the robbers has been obtained.—Sutherland Courier.

Cramer and Carl Holman.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

E. Harris, of the Harris Pharmacy, at Ogallala, spent Monday in town on business.

Loren Hastings came up from Omaha to spend Sunday with the home folks.

The hum of the separator is heard in many parts of the county, and reports from the threshermen as to yield varies greatly. Some fields have been threshed which averaged thirty bushels to the acre, other fields fall below twenty and in others the average has been but ten bushels.

It is said that the North Platte ball team has already struck a financial rock; that the treasury is about depleted and whether future games are played depends on business men and others putting up more money. Ball playing is costly sport, for the gate receipts are never half way sufficient to keep a team in the field.

Ray Guiles, of North Platte, left for his home Wednesday afternoon. He had been here visiting with his sister, Mrs. D. H. Garrison, of the Second ward, and for a number of days was unable to stir on account of a violent attack of inflammatory rheumatism. He has been on the mend for several days.—Lexington Pioneer.

Dr. L. F. Nisley, of Gothenburg, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Nisley, of the Second ward, this city, was overcome by a violent attack of appendicitis last Friday at his Gothenburg home. He was at once taken to North Platte where an operation was performed and his appendix removed. He had suffered with previous attacks and his condition was serious when taken to the Platte. He is reported to be recovering nicely from the operation.—Lexington Pioneer.

Automatic Love

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union)

The day that Elliott Vance graduated from the Academy at his native town old Professor Dale, with whom he was a great favorite, gave him a piece of advice on philosophy that never left his memory.

"You've been a model student, Vance," were his words, "and I think you are amenable to good counsel. I have worked out a great principle—the automatic. Here is the proposition: put yourself in harmony with whatever you undertake, moral, business or social; be right and the rest will come automatically."

Elliott found the theory a placid and comfortable one. He went to the city and sought employment. He found it with a small but thriving dealer in surgical instruments. He was engaged in a subordinate position.

"Now, then, to apply the automatic process," he told himself, "to act in harmony with my new environment. I am a part of this establishment. What part? The working force. My full duty is to follow out a clear, clean line, solely to the interest of my employer. I shall do my best with no doubting, no loitering, unalterable fidelity to the man who hires me. Progress, development—the reward will come automatically."

In two years Vance was manager of the business. At the end of five he had a working interest. Routine, strict attention to details, earnest effort and honest work settled him into an ideal position.

Encouraged, confident in the value of his theory, Elliott adapted it to his moral and social life. He thought out what was salutary in the way of habits and formed none that ended only in vexation and weakness. He chose companions and friends who seemed of the right sort, was builded up by affiliation with those of high standards and watched and corrected the failings of those he could influence.

At twenty-six Elliott Vance was offered quite a large amount for his interest in the business. He viewed his opulent bank account as a practical demonstration of the cult automatic. Then some new ideas came into his mind. He had never known much of womankind. Business first, last and all the time; he had excluded all that was sentimental and flirtatious. There was a reaction as he threw off the business harness. He began to feel bored; time hung heavily on his hands; loneliness oppressed him. He envied those of his fellows who had married and settled down. He had missed love and longed for its impulse. There came to his mind the years between twelve and eighteen, when he had gone through the average sentimental experiences of the schoolboy.

He could remember his first girl friend, red-cheeked, bright-eyed Viola Reeves. Then in the retrospective view there were others. A sort of hankering filled his mind to go back to his native town and see if among those he had known there was not some one of the old-time lassies grown into blooming young ladyhood, who would have the power to thrill him and fill him with the delicious impulse of love.

On the automatic principle nothing was more simple. He would drift in among his old circle of acquaintances. The environment would do the rest, serenity of purpose would bring about success in love, just as it had in business. Alas! one month after testing out the problem Elliott found that the results did not apply. Sweet Myrtle Farr he found wedded and the mother of three children. Winsome, keen-witted Edie Ward had devoted herself to teaching and was a confirmed old maid. Others had forgotten him. He had become an alien, a stranger. Viola Reeves was not in evidence. Her family had moved away from town years ago.

The automatic had failed to work in this new instance. Love was not to be acquired by routine haphazard or environment. No certain young lady who had come across his path had attracted him; he had met no fair charmer he cared two pins about.

One day he took a long auto ride and was lining a sluggish brook when the sound of dismal wailing halted him. He traced its source. At the edge of the stream a girl was weeping bitterly and a boy was striving to soothe her. He even tried to lift her, but the burden was too heavy for his frail arms and she cried out that her foot was twisted and she could not walk.

Elliott came toward them and speedily learned that they were two woods wanderers strayed from home. The girl had fallen into a quagmire and was a sight with slime and earth. He lifted her in his arms, bore her to the auto and was directed by the grateful lad.

"Here's home," the latter announced as they neared a pretty cottage. "There's Aunt Viola. Mother has gone to town. Oh, aunt! we've had a terrible time!"

Elliott Vance thrilled—"Aunt Viola!" She stood and stared at Elliott. There was both gladness and welcome in her eyes and a deeper glow as the lad told of the kindness of a stranger.

Stranger no longer, he and Viola Reeves, he decided within the hour. For the true blue, friendly smile on the face of Viola told Elliott that automatically the old boy and girl love had been reawakened in these latter years.

"They do more than please your taste — they satisfy!"

Chesterfields "let you in" on an entirely new kind of cigarette enjoyment.

They not only please your taste, but they do something else besides.

Know what a big, juicy beefsteak does for your hunger?

Well, Chesterfields do exactly the same thing for your smoking. They touch the "smoke-spot." They let you know you're smoking. They SATISFY!

The blend does it. And the blend is the manufacturer's secret. Unlike a patent, it cannot be copied or even closely imitated.

If you want a smoke that really "satisfies" — ask for "Chesterfields."
