

SEEK GOLD IN THE ARCTIC

Adventurers Are Now Prospecting the Coasts of Baffin Bay and Davis Strait.

One of the really pathetic stories of modern history is the mutiny of Henry Hudson's crew when he was exploring the arctic waters of North America, and his abandonment, with his son, in that vast inland sea that bears his name, a writer in the Brooklyn Eagle remarks. Many lives have been sacrificed in the quest of the North and South poles. Sir John Franklin's and the Jeannette's parties in the north and the recent Scott expedition at the south only need be mentioned.

Plans are afoot to open up the Baffin bay region to commerce. For many years small steamers have been making summer visits to Hudson bay to trade with the natives, and the Canadian government is building a railway to one of its ports. Railroad and commercial development of Alaska by American enterprise has caused prospecting of the mineral resources of the coast of Baffin bay and Davis strait, with the result of finding, at the former place, gold in sufficient quantities to justify development, and coal of excellent quality along the latter. The latitude is about the same as that of the Yukon region and only a few degrees north of that of Nome, which has developed into a large community. So impelling is the lure of gold that the hardships of an arctic climate will not deter adventurers from hazarding their lives against the wealth said to be buried under the eternal snow and ice of Baffin island.

CHAUNCEY'S TURN TO LAUGH

Close-Fisted Farmer Learned Something About the Value Legal Light Set on Services.

Chauncey M. Depew, in writing the story of his life, recalls his first law case. It was in Peckskill. The client was a farmer and he wanted an opinion on certain property rights.

Depew spent a week in looking up the points of law that had bearing on the case and when he had finished charged the modest fee of $5.

"Too much," cried the farmer. "But it's taken me a whole week to prepare this," protested Depew. "Don't make no difference," declared the farmer. "I figure $1.50 is all it's worth and that's all you're going to get."

About a week later the man came to the office again.

"Mr. Depew," he said, "I had some doubts about that opinion of yours, so I took it down to New York and showed it to Mr. ——. And what do you think he charged me, just for reading that opinion of yours and putting his O. K. on it?"

"How much," demanded Depew, all excited.

"Five hundred dollars!"

Canada's Bird Refuge.
It is something for one bird to tell another that Canada has provided a series of reserves in the province of Quebec where birds are safe from man-made troubles.

Unlike most bird refuges, Perce Rock, a picturesque island near Perce village; the east and north cliffs of Bonaventure island, three miles further away; and the northernmost of the Magdalen islands, 124 miles out to sea, have been set apart specifically to protect birds whose value to mankind is chiefly their beauty as a part of nature.

There is no attempt to argue, for example, that the gannet, the kittiwake, or the razorbill auk should be protected because they "help the farmer"; they are protected simply because they are birds.

No human being may steal an egg from their nests; no weapon dangerous to their welfare may be brought within a mile of their island sanctuaries.

Naturally all other birds are equally safe, and the refuges will be a help toward carrying out the purpose of the international treaty for bird protection.

Yellowstone Park Growth.

Yellowstone national park is expected to grow 1,285 square miles larger as soon as the present congress reaches a bill neglected by the last session. The proposed extension, 30 miles to the south of the established boundary, as described in Popular Mechanics magazine, takes in Jackson lake and the wonderful mountain scenery about it, part of the famous Jackson's Hole country.

Besides providing the only variety of scenic beauty now lacking in the park, the addition includes the summer grazing ground of America's last large herd of elk, and some of the finest trout-fishing water in the country.

Fish Had False Teeth.

A fish wearing false teeth was hooked in the Gulf of Mexico, near Indian Rocks, Fla., by A. L. Anderson of Independence.

Judge Anderson was invited to go out in a boat with H. H. Ingersoll, a well known resident of Indian Rocks. During the day they brought up a specimen of the "swell toad" or burfish variety.

As the hook was pulled out it brought with it a front plate with four false teeth attached to a gold bridge.

Later it was learned by the astonished fishermen that a few days before a visitor from Oldsmar, a nearby resort, had dropped his teeth while bathing.—Kansas City Star.

HONOR NOT ENTIRELY WATT'S

At Least Two Inventors Before Him Had the Idea of the Value of Steam Power.

It is a popular idea that we owe the steam engine entirely to the inventive genius of James Watt.

The idea, however, is quite erroneous, for steam was in use as a motive power before he came on the scene. Several types of steam engine were in use, notably Savory's and Newcomen's.

But they were cumbersome, extravagant, and of small power, and it was while repairing a model of a Newcomen engine that Watt, who was working as a mathematical instrument maker at the time, evolved various improvements, notably the separate condenser.

Meeting Matthew Boulton, a manufacturer of metal goods, he entered into partnership and they produced engines, which at once established Watt's reputation. Improvements and inventions followed quickly, one after the other, and the present-day advance in motive power is due to the pioneer work of Watt. Even today the steam engine remains the same in principle as Watt evolved it.

It is an interesting fact, by the way, that Watt's workshop, exactly as he left it, still exists at Heathfield hall, Handsworth, where the engineering genius spent the last nineteen years of his life carrying on scientific investigations.—London Tit-Bits.

FRIENDS OF SUNNY FRANCE

Scotsmen for Many Centuries Fought and Lived Under the Flag of the Bourbons.

Until the eventual failure of the Hanoverian line on the throne of Britain, there was always a company, at least, of Scots in the Royal Guard in France. When Louis IX made his fatal crusade in Egypt, a Scottish legion fought under the Bourbon standards. Likewise, in all the marches of Jeanne d'Arc there were Scottish volunteers. Scottish schools, academies, hospitals, convents and other institutions flourished in France for many years. Queen Marie, it is said, spent her last years in exile in one of the Scottish convents in Paris.

During these centuries, all France was a land of pilgrimage for the Scots. Trains of pilgrims were seen annually assembling at Saint Waast. Pious Scots also founded shrines at Meaux, Rheims and in many secluded valleys of Champagne. As late as 1810 manuscripts attest the presence of Scottish emigrants, whose names soon became confused with French forms. It is said that one French king, despairing of the frivolity of his heir, said to him, "If thou should govern them badly, I would far rather that a Scot came to rule over them."

Disatisfaction.

The old saying that some folks would find fault if they were going to be hanged is undoubtedly true. There are too many dissatisfied human beings, a minority, to be sure, but enough to shade the picture which portrays our everyday life. Hanging is a serious matter, and no one can wonder if its contemplation causes dissatisfaction to the hero of the occasion, but lesser ills and woes, and common things like wind and weather, lack of money, unpleasant occupations, a crumpled roseleaf in the bed, a wrinkle in some other woman's get up which has escaped her own, turn loose a stream of fault-finding disagreeable and contemptible. We might as well decide that we all have something to bear in this world and that we will bear it without grumbling; we might as well subscribe to the truth that if it is not one thing, it is another, and set our teeth and say nothing.—Caroline Harris Lee.

"Ghost" of Thomas a Becket.

St. Thomas, the "first Agnostic," whose festival was placed on the shortest day to punish his unbeliever, shares this anniversary with a very militant namesake, Thomas a Becket, pilgrimages to whose shrine inspired Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales."

His specter, known among the vergers as "Thomas a Becket's ghost," can be seen occasionally in the crypt of Canterbury cathedral. It is a real ghost, and has been photographed.

One photograph showed a dim figure of a prelate against a pillar, while another snapshot taken from the same position, but on a different day, revealed no such appearance.

Rationalists explain that an ancient fresco on the pillar, painted out at the Reformation, becomes visible through the overlaid material during damp weather.—London Chronicle.

Housekeeping.

We went housekeeping immediately upon our marriage, for mother said she despised those boarding people; she went to housekeeping when she was married, and she meant all her children should do the same; and if their husbands weren't able to go to housekeeping then they weren't able to be husbands, and there was an end of it; and no two people, she said, brought up in different fashions, could unite their lives into one without some jarring, and a third party was sure to turn that jar into an earthquake; and if there were fewer third parties half the trouble would be done away with; for she believed half the divorces and separations and quarrels in the state were brought about by boarding house intimacies with third parties.—Harriet Prescott Spofford.
