Poultry Exhibit is Large.

The annual show of the Lincoln County Poultry and Pet Stock association opened Wednesday in the building formerly occupied by the Gem candy kitchen on Dewey street with a very large and attractive line of exhibits. Practically all strains of chickens known to the fancier and breeder are shown, together with geese and ducks and there is a very liberal showing of rabbits. Many of the exhibits come from country residents, evidence that the farmer or his wife are interested in growing the best there is in poultry as well as cattle and horses.

The attendance at the show has been large, especially yesterday afternoon when the space not used by the pens was packed with admirers of that which is good in the poultry line.

The awards were made yesterday by Judge Smiley, of Beaver Crossing, who has a national reputation as a poultry grower and poultry judge.
