Gambling is a great human passion, like fishing. The trouble with Tom Moore in "Lord and Lady Algy" at the Crystal Saturday and Monday is that he has a great passion for gambling or betting on horse races. Besides he loves horses and owns his own racers. But the woman in the case, as usual, objects to Lord Algy's mad mania for betting. Perhaps she is merely jealous of his attention to horses. Women are that way, you know. Well, it is a long row for Tom Moore to hoe before he gets his wife to smile an answer to the famous Irish smile of his.
