Hogs Lost Money.

Results of a survey of 312 Iowa farms show up unfavorably for pork production as a profitable business in 1919. These farms are located in the Southwestern part of the state and may be taken as a fair representation of Middle West farms on which hogs are raised. The total expense of feeding hogs during the period covered by the investigation made by Iowa State college, averaged $16.30 for every 100 pounds of pork produced. During the same period the market price of hogs averaged $14.50, which represents a loss of $1.80 a hundred, or about $4 on every hog fattened. Cost of feeding was based on corn being worth $1.50; oats, 66 cents; tankage, $1.10 a ton; skim milk, 50 cents a hundred. Pasture was charged at $5.70 an acre. Feed cost alone amounted to $14.09 on an average for every 100 pounds of pork grown. Man labor was reckoned at 40 cents an hour, and horse labor at 20 cents an hour. A moderate charge for interest on the money invested, the use of equipment, buildings, etc. brought the total cost of producing 100 pounds of pork to $18.20.

The land drawing at Torrington, Wyo., will take place today and the score or more ex-service men of North Platte who went there to register are remaining to hear the result.
