LOOKING TO THE FUTURE

Perhaps you, Mr. Farmer and Stock Raiser, read with more or less interest the article entitled "Southern Farms and Ranches" which appeared in the February 24th and 27th issues of The Semi-Weekly Tribune. Unded ordinary circumstances wisdom would forbid comparison and contrasts between different sections of the country but in the present case the interest of humanity at large makes it a duty not to be evaded. Unless Northern and Western cattle men can provide ample feed and water beyond all chance of failure, it seems the part of good judgment and sound business sense for them to move their herds to regions where these important elements are always available. We do not believe that any of our friends in the livestock business in this section of the country, or any other business man, will argue against the logic of this position. These men are facing a condition in which sentiment cannot be permitted to enter. As an example we call your attention to the drought which prevailed in the states of Wyoming and Montana during the past year, which made it necessary for stock to be transferred to other sections of the country for feeding at an enormous expense, or sold at a great sacrifice. The small farmer who raises and finishes only a few head of good stock annually may provide water and feed—very often with the greatest difficulty and heart-breaking expense, but the great cattle and sheep owners who are trying to furnish beef, mutton and breeding stock on a large scale, men who need large areas for pasturage and much water, cannot much longer continue under the strain they have endured.

There is a way out of his dilemma, and it leads to SOUTHERN FARMS AND RANCHES.

If you would like to know more regarding the possibilities and opportunities to be had in the Southern country, write us for descriptive literature, or better still—call at our office.

The county assessors have a delicate task this year in making their quadrennial assessment of farm lands. Lands have at least doubled in price since the last assessment. Part of this increase is real and permanent, part real and temporary, and part purely imaginary, the result of speculation. What proportion should be assessed for taxation purposes to the man who owns land to farm, not to speculate with?

Dixon—Diamonds—Dixon.

North Platte was in the grip of a well developed blizzard Wednesday, which began early in the morning and continued until the middle of the afternoon. The snow was whirled and drifted by a strong wind from the northwest and at times the opposite side of the street was obscured from vision. The storm was not so bad west, but between here and Grand Island it was severe, necessitating tying up freight trains. Several inches of snow fell during the storm.
