

FAIR AND FORTY

By LILLIAN M. RICHARDS.

(© 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Down on a narrow street, where the newsboys are shouting "extra" most of the time, Myra Wiggins sits at the cashier's desk in one of those famous restaurants with a buckwheat front. For three years now she has sat in the same window. Her eyes and ears are always open and nothing escapes her notice.

"Say, mister," loudly called Myra one day to a customer trying to sneak out, "pay your check here, please."

"Huh," growled the man, coming back, "think you're smart, don't you?" And slamming the money down on the counter, "I suppose you thought I was trying to steal a feed."

"My goodness, no," replied Myra, smilingly. "Guess you were suddenly called to a fire; but after this, when in here, be sure and see me before you leave."

"Well, is that so," sneeringly, "I suppose you're the one who runs this place, or maybe you—"

Just then her antagonist felt a strong hand grab his collar and demand an apology. Without hesitating the irritant murmured something about being sorry, and slunk out of the door. Myra's well-rounded face became as red as roses when she looked up into the set features of big Jim Roland.

Jim was a traveling man, and every time he came to town it was not the eats alone that brought him to this well-known restaurant. Myra Wiggins' welcome smile and pleasant "How do" won him from the start. Now their friendship grew rapidly into something more deep and lasting.

They were both around the age of forty and had come to that quiet understanding of accepting things as they were; neither inquired into the other's affairs.

A buxom widow was Myra, with one child, whom she boarded at a small farmhouse in the country. Little Irene Wiggins was the joy of her life, and Myra delighted in her trips to the region where she could breathe God's pure air, away from the smoke and dust of the city. One day, as she and Irene were starting for a stroll over the hills, a rosy-cheeked lad of ten begged to go with them.

"He lives here, too, mamma," pleaded her little girl. "He's my bestest chum. Can't he go?"

"Well, all right," replied Myra, good-naturedly, and taking his hand she inquired: "What's your name, little boy?"

"My name's Jack Roland," was his sturdy reply, as he stumbled along by her side.

"Roland!" gasped she, hearing the name. Then, curiously, "And what's your father's name? Jack, too?"

"No, my daddy's name is Jim," and with upturned face, "you've never met my daddy, have you? He's the biggest man in the world."

Myra's thoughts were racing a mile a minute, and her cheeks burned with curiosity. "He must mean my Jim," she thought, and still it didn't seem possible. The children ran ahead and were sliding on the ice, little dreaming of the turmoil they'd created for Myra. After a few minutes' silent pondering she called them to her side and turned back toward the house. As they were chatting in their childish way she heard little Jack say to Irene:

"My Nanna's coming this afternoon with daddy. She brings me candy and everything."

Unable to restrain the question any longer Myra asked, "And who's your Nanna, little boy?" at the same time dreading the answer.

"Why, that's his mother, of course," quickly replied Irene, as if Myra ought to know.

"She works in the city," joined Jack wistfully.

It was with quiet dignity that she refused Jim's many invitations the next week, and his big, jovial face wore a puzzled expression, although he said nothing. Myra, who was usually the picture of health, looked drawn and pale. She'd grown fond of Jim Roland, and to discover him in this light hurt not a little.

Tucking Irene on her sled, Myra started down the back lane through the meadows. The cold, clear air brought the color to her cheeks, as Irene pulled the end of her scarf and shouted, "Gitty-up-horsy." It was a wonderful day and ended all too quickly. On their way back, as Myra went to jump a brook she fell with a scream in the snow. Irene tried to help her up, but finding her arms limp became frightened and cried for help. Little Jack Roland and his daddy, who were walking near by, came to their assistance.

"Is this little girl your sister?" he asked smilingly after the pain had subsided.

"No, Jim, she's my daughter," explained Myra quietly. "I've been a widow for several years now. And I—I thought until recently that you were single also."

"Why—so I am," he replied emphatically. "Little Jack's mother died when he was a baby."

"And—Nanna?" asked Myra tremblingly.

"Nanna," with a relieved look, "She's my sister, and has almost been a mother to Jack, who knows her by no other name."

Then, leaning closer and looking into her eyes, he continued: "Myra, dear, he would so like to have a real mother. The children already love each other. Could—could you ever care enough about a big clumsy like myself to—"

"Oh, Jim, I'm so happy."

TERM'S ORIGIN IN DISPUTE

Many Explanations of the Letters "O. K." Have Been Made, but Few Are Trustworthy.

Quite a cycle of legendary explanations have gathered around the origin of the popular term "O. K." It is held that in early colonial days the best rum and tobacco were imported from Aux Cayes, in San Domingo. Hence the best of anything came to be known locally as Aux Cayes, or "O. K."

Another explanation refers to the use of "Old Keokuk," an Indian chief, who is said to have signed treaties with the initials "O. K." However, the term didn't come into general use until the presidential campaign of 1828, when the supposed illiteracy of Andrew Jackson, the Democratic candidate, led Seba Smith, the humorist, writing under the name of "Major Jack Downing," to start the story that Jackson indorsed his papers "O. K."

James Parton, the noted biographer, discovered in the records of the Nashville court, of which Jackson was judge, numerous documents indorsed "O. K.," meaning "order rescinded." He therefore urged that it was a belated business that Major Downing saw on the desk of the presidential candidate. The Democrats, in lieu of denying the charge, adopted the letters "O. K." as a sort of party cry and fastened them on their banners.

ONE OF THE OLDEST METALS

Abundant Proof That Iron Has Been in Use Since the Very Earliest Days.

Iron must have been familiar in the time of Moses. A wedge made of iron was left in the great pyramid by the builders, which proves that the metal was known and in use about 1,500 B. C. Besides, in the fourth chapter of Genesis, it is mentioned that Tubal Cain was a pioneer in developing the arts of iron making and brass working. Brass, however, was a very indefinite term among the natives. When spoken of in the Scriptures it is seldom to be understood to signify the alloy of copper and zinc now called by that name. The "brass" tempered for edged tools or weapons of war was a bronze, usually a compound of copper and tin.

Copper was also known to mankind at a very early period. Articles of copper were found 81 feet under the statue of Ramesses the Great, which was erected 3,500 years ago. Debris has accumulated there to a depth of nine feet, and the copper articles were found, on further excavation, 72 feet lower down.

Gretna Green. Gretna Green, the rendezvous of eloping couples, was once the haunt of persons who exercised cupidity at the expense of Cupid, and innkeepers, ferrymen and tollhouse tenders exploited the couples who fled there. Any witnesses served to make the marriages recognized as legal, but the "professional witnesses" there, like the "marrying parsons" of some American towns, engaged "touts" to bring couples to them, and when the railroad from Glasgow to Carlisle started running, the station platform at Gretna Green thronged with these obnoxious "commissioned men."

According to a popular legend, blacksmith shops were favorite meeting places for eloping couples, but authority is lacking for stories of smithies who would pause while shoeing horses to help legalize marriages.

Hatshopsu-Pharaoh. Who antedated De Lesseps (1859) by 4,000 years in digging the Suez canal? A woman. Hatshopsu-Pharaoh. She ascended the throne of Egypt with her brother, Thothmes II, about 1600 B. C. Her courage and capacity brought the reins of government into her own hands. At the death of Thothmes she was the master spirit of the age. The dominant woman built the splendid terraced rock temple of Dair-el-Bahari on the Theban plain. Her chief glory was in sending an expedition to the Land of Punt (Ophir) by way of the Red Sea. A woman dug the first Suez canal, and as the expedition returned up the Nile she shouts that greeted the queen (who always wore the habiliment of the male) was the first "God save the king" in history!

Too Much Self-Indulgence. The greatest weakness of human nature is self-indulgence, drifting along the path of least resistance—with ill health at the end of the road. Good health is, of course, the first prerequisite to a long and useful life. Longevity is sought as a high price of constant exercise of will power and self-control. There are many persons who have not that will power and self-control. In these cases we cannot go against nature by any amount of teaching.—Exchange.

Loss of the Griffin. This vessel, the first to navigate the western lakes, was loaded with furs and other goods by La Salle, to the value of 22,000 livres, and sent back to Montreal, via Mackinac and Niagara, in order to pay off La Salle's creditors. It set sail on September 18, 1679, with a crew of five men and pilot, and was never heard of again. A severe storm sprang up that night and it is believed the vessel struck the sand and was buried in it, or it may have been lost through the treachery of the crew.
