(C. 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) A group of five girls were sitting before an open fireplace in the living room of Edith Hall's country home. Four of them were enthusiastically planning a sleighing party. Elizabeth Martin, as usual, simply sat and listened. Now and then she sighed softly as one of her friends related some incident which took place on the last sleighing party. They were trying to decide what fellows they could depend upon to even up their party.

"There is that new family across the street and a perfectly stunning young man comes out of the house every morning, but he simply will not look at one of us," said the bostess with a hopeless sigh, "He was present at the church social the other evening, and when I met him the next morning I thought surely he would recognize me, but he passed by without even looking at me!"

Each girl had some such story to relate, excepting Elizabeth.

Soon Elizabeth excused herself, and with a hurried good-by she went out. "I suppose Beth would have to be included," sald one girl.

"Yes, but I doubt if she will go," replied another. "You know how she is when there are fellows concerned."

Just outside in the hallway Elizabeth Martin smothered a low cry. She had come back, unnoticed, for her rubhers, and as she heard her name tossed around she took a quick step forward as if to rush into the room where the girls were talking. A moment later she had changed her mind, and noiselessly she slipped out of the bouse and hurried across the street and home,

So that was what they thought! She was afraid of fellows! Well, she would show them something. She, who had never had a benu-she would go on their sleighing party and she would go with a fellow, too. Yes, she would go with Allen Morse, the fellow who had just moved in, next door -the fellow that all the girls had tried to attract and had failed. But she would not fail! Then perhaps they would change their minds, and she would be the ugly duckling no longer.

The next thing to decide was "how to meet him." It was Tuesday and the party was to be Thursday. She spent the rest of the afternoon and evening in thought. That day the sun had shone brightly, and the snow on the walk in front of her house had melted.

"If it freezes tonight, I can do it," she told herself and as she dropped off to sleep late that night, a smile rested on her lips.

Fate was with her, for the next morning was cold and windy. She was up early and with her coat on and an attractive tam, which was arranged becomingly over one ear, she stood in the doorway, hidden from view by a curtain which was drawn partly aside. She watched the pedestrians as they passed, carefully picking their way along the ley sidewalk. Suddenly the curtain at the door was drawn together and Elizabeth Martin came quickly out of her house, just as a young man came into view in front of his own house, next door, They both reached the end of Eliza beth's walk at the same moment, and their eyes met. As Elizabeth turned the corner her foot slipped on the Ice, and with a low cry she fell forward. Allen Morse threw out his arms and caught her, holding her closely for a brief moment, but long enough to bring a burning flush to the girl's cheeks.

"All right?" he asked, simply, She thought she was, she told bim, and after thanking him, she tried to free herself from his grasp. But he had mistaken the quiver in her voice for one of pain, and kept a firm hold on her arm. As she stepped forward she swayed a little, then sank back in his arms.

"Better let me help you," he offered, and with a supporting arm around her, he led her back into the house He made sure that she was resting comfortably before he left her, with a casual remark that "he would drop in in the evening to see if she was all right."

As soon as she heard the front door close she quickly arose and ran to the window, from where she watched him until he was out of sight.

"Well," she declared, "if all young men were like him, I would soon lose my reputation for being afraid of them." True to his promise, Allen Morse rang the doorbell of Elizabeth Martin's home at eight o'clock that evening He was surprised when she herself answered the ring, and invited him in, but a greater surprise was waiting Elizabeth's girl friends, for before he left her that evening Allen had given his promise to accompany her on the sleighing party.

The following evening a bright moon lighted the way for a merry crowd, packed tightly in a large sleigh. Elizabeth Martin was undoubtedly the hap plest member of the party, unless perhaps it was Allen Morse. As she presented Allen to the others, she smiled mysteriously.

Unable to wait any longer one of the girls finally whispered enviously, "Beth, how did you ever do it?"

The astonishing reply came in three short words, "Just vamped him!" and she refused to tell anything more.

Pretty Eastern Legend Concerning the Affection and Loyalty Displayed by Burmese Queen.

A legend concerning Mount Popa, dealing with the time when the Burmese court flourished, tells of a blacksmith of prodigious strength named Mahagiri. He possessed a sister of great beauty who was commanded by the king of Tagaung to be brought before him, shortly afterward being chosen as the principal queen. The king's infatuation brought Jealousy among the lesser queens, and they instituted a plot to destroy her.

As a means of destroying the girl's influence over the king, her brother was charged with being a traitor, and the king, in his terror, ordered the blacksmith to be brought to justice and burned. The unhappy sister used all her allurements to save her brother, but falled, finally asking that she might be present at the burning. During the ceremony, before a hand could be outstretched to save her, she jumped into the fire, and was burned with her brother.

A few days after the burning the spirits of the two victims were reported in the form of two "nats." In recognition of this, King Kyan-yit-Tha later issued an edict that all his subjects should honor the spirits by suspending a coconut shell in their houses, this custom still being observed by every Burman in the coun-

Head of University In the Great Yellow Territory Has Proof of Spread of Occidental Ideas.

"He had been pretty well all over the world," said the professor, "and when I asked him what country had impressed him most, he said at once, China. And when I asked him what in China had Impressed him most, he said at once, the West China Union university. The professor's remarks were made to the Daily News, London, and he followed them up with a delightful story of the way in which Chinese eminences showed their appreciation of this blossom of Western enterprise, the university of which the professor happens to be the president. Some dozen years ago he was fleeing for his life 1,500 miles down the Yangtze to save his head. He was a "foreign devil," and no university had been started. Seven or eight years later, the military governor of Szechuan sent him a beautifully inscribed statement of his opinion of the university, and a gift of $3,000. The professor was on his way home via Peking. In the Chinese capital he had an interview with the president of the Chinese republic, then Yuan Shihgift to the university

The First Congress.

The first congress was supposed to meet on March 4, 1789, and it is a curious fact that there was not a quorum of either house present for a month thereafter. Only eight senstors were present on March 4, and they 6, when a quorum was present. Only 13 members of the house assembled on March 4, and a quorum was not present until April 1. The Constitution of the United States took effect in the following states: Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland. South Carolina, New Hampshire, Virginla and New York, on March 4, Dream That Means Death.

A peculiar dream is that which has visited a certain Irish family for genexations, invariably before a death or some big change. They call it their kissing lady dream. The person who experiences it dreams that they are Range 30, west of the 6th P. M., of sitting in a very old-fashioned room before a blazing wood fire, when suddenly the door behind them opens and a beautiful girl in green, tight-fitting garments enters, and, stealing softly behind them, draws their head gently back and kisses them full on the lips. As she does so there is always the clanging of steel on a stone staircase, the hurried tramp of armed men, and they awake trembling.

Mnemonic for Grams, Scientific papers are getting to use the metric system of weights and measures more and more, and it has become almost necessary for every one to be able to convert such terms as grams into ounces at once. It is not however, easy to remember that there are 28.35 grams in an ounce. However, if one remembers the sentence, "It converts one ounce," the figures will instantly recur to the mind. For beginning. the number of letters in each word gives 2-8-3-5.

Mnemonies for other terms of the metric system are needed.
